Bike rodeo rolls into town

They were getting an education. But instead of cracking books, these students were strapping on helmets and pedaling bicycles.

It was all part of a Bicycle Safety Rodeo on Tuesday for fourth- and fifth-graders at East Heights Elementary School.

"I think it's absolutely awesome," said Rhonda Wilson, assistant principal. "This is learning in action. It's hands-on, it's minds-on and they are fully engaged."

The Bicycle Safety Rodeo is taught by Doug Beckhart. The program is organized by Kosair Children's Hospital in Louisville and the Governor's Highway Safety Branch of the Kentucky Transportation Cabinet.

He visits about 150 schools per year, teaching students about the proper ways to signal turns and how to cross train tracks.

Beckhart also is very serious about the importance of bike safety.

But what about football, baseball and softball players, he asked the students. Do they wear helmets?

Romneys paid nearly $2 million in taxes

More than 800 pages in tax return

By Tom Raum
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Mitt Romney, one of the wealthiest candidates ever to seek the presidency, paid nearly $2 million in federal taxes on $13.7 million in income that he and his wife reported last year, his U.S. returns showed Friday. That came to an effective tax rate of 14.1 percent, lower than millions of middle-income Americans but actually more than he had to pay.

Most of Romney's income was from investment returns. That is why his rate was lower than taxpayers whose income was mostly from wages, which can be taxed at higher rates.

Romney's taxes have emerged as a key issue during the 2012 presidential race with President Barack Obama. Romney released his 2010 returns in January, but he continues to decline to disclose returns from previous years — including those while he worked at Bain Capital, the private equity firm he cofounded.

The Obama campaign and other Democrats have pushed for fuller disclosures, reminding the Republican candidate his father, George Romney, released a dozen years of returns when he ran for president.

Overall, the Romneys' main tax return and separate forms for blind trusts totaled more than 800 pages. The blind-trust income came from hedge funds and other complex investment vehicles. The couple also reported $3.5 million in income "from sources outside the United States," citing "various countries." Their forms included filings on holdings in Switzerland, Ireland, Germany and the Cayman Islands.

The Obama campaign accused Romney anew of profiting from millions invested overseas and "loopholes and tax shelters only available to those at the top."

Apparently hoping to resolve basic questions voters might have, the Romney campaign also released a letter from his accountants saying that in

Man is guilty in truck crash that killed two

Firefighter was one of victims

A Spottsville man pleaded guilty Friday to two counts of murder in connection with a Valentine's Day vehicle collision that killed two people, one of whom was an off-duty Henderson firefighter.

Albert David Williams, 59, entered the plea in Henderson Circuit Court.

Williams also pleaded guilty to one count of driving under the influence (third offense, aggravated).

Williams is accused in the deaths of Henderson firefighter Jonathan Coomes, 29, and a passenger in Williams' vehicle, Michael Pritchett, 56, of Baskett.

The accident occurred on U.S. 60 around 5:20 p.m. Feb. 14 when the 2006 Dodge Ram truck driven by Williams crossed into the path of Coomes' 1989 GMC Sierra truck, authorities said.

Evidence at the scene indicated Coomes tried to avoid the collision, but was unable to get out of the way of Williams' truck, officials said.

Coomes was pronounced dead at the scene. Pritchett died more than two months later, on April 22, from injuries he suffered in the collision.

The Commonwealth's Attorney's Office has recommended Williams receive 25 years on each charge of murder and 365 days for the DUI offense. Prosecutors also have recommended the sentences run concurrently.

Sentencing is set for Oct. 22.

At 100, Emmett Beasley still counting his blessings

There will be 150 or so folks out at Reed today to celebrate the recent 100th birthday of Emmett Beasley.

In addition to eating burgoo and barbecue, there will be lots of reminiscing. But there's no point asking Beasley what he did for a living.

"People ask me, 'What did you do in your life?' I'd say, you don't have time" to hear about it all, he said.

"There's not many businesses I've not been in," he said while lunching on a bologna sandwich Friday at his home at Beals.

The son of William Ambrose and "Mama Susie" Beasley, he grew up on a farm in the Scuffletown Bottoms near Beals.

He was earning money by age 5. "My first job was janitor" at the one-room Griffin Creek School he attended, he recalled. "Dad would fix me up with some coal oil and corn cobs and matches, and I would start the fire" in the stove that

Coming Sunday: Giant pears, pet voting

■ There has been a lot of discussion the past several weeks about the devastating impact of the summer's heat and drought on crops. But there's a flip side: pears the size of softballs. Donna Stinnett has details — and photos — in Sunday's paper.

State to join in drug initiatives

■ Governor: Prescription abuse still fast growing

By Roger Alford
Associated Press

FRANKFORT — Kentucky will join several states hard hit by prescription drug abuse to develop strategies to combat what is described as a still-growing problem, Gov. Steve Beshear said Friday.

Alabama, Arkansas, Colorado, New Mexico, Oregon and Virginia will also take part in the initiative sponsored by the National Governors Association.

“Prescription drug abuse continues to be the fastest growing drug-related issue facing our communities, and unfortunately, Kentucky is not alone in this plight,” Beshear said in a statement. “As the problem persists and spreads, we recognize that we need comprehensive regional and national strategies to combat the abuse, while ensuring that the legitimate medical needs of our citizens are met.”

Representatives from the seven states will hold meetings to develop policies aimed at curbing prescription abuse. They also will get technical advice from national experts.

According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, one person dies every 19 minutes in the United States from an overdose. And in Kentucky, overdoses are blamed for more than 1,000 deaths a year.

In a separate initiative announced Friday, Kentucky Attorney General Jack Conway joined another national effort aimed at preventing prescription abuse among teenagers.

“Prescription drug abuse is an all hands on deck issue,” Conway said in a statement.

Conway, co-chairman of the National Association of Attorneys General’s Substance Abuse Committee, said the goal of the initiative is to prevent a half million teens nationwide from abusing prescription drugs within five years through what’s dubbed The Medicine Abuse Project.

“Nonmedical use or abuse of prescription painkillers is the fastest-growing drug problem in the United States and it is killing our kids,” Conway said. “This is an epidemic that is beginning in homes across Kentucky and the nation.”

Conway, who has made the fight against prescription drug abuse a top priority during his two terms as attorney general, said more Kentuckians are now dying from overdoses than car wrecks.

The Medicine Abuse Project will focus on educating teens about the dangers of prescription drug abuse.

Superintendents concerned about restraint proposal

The Associated Press

FRANKFORT — Some Kentucky school superintendents are expressing concerns about a proposed state regulation on the use of student restraint.

Pendleton County Schools Superintendent Anthony Strong told The Kentucky Enquirer that the proposal is too vague. He says employee expectations need to be defined better.

“There appears to be subjectivity as to when the staff member should intervene,” said Strong. “There is a huge question as to where the line is.”

Kentucky Department of Education spokeswoman Lisa Gross says the proposal is still in draft form and wording could be changed. A public hearing on the issue will be held Tuesday in Frankfort.

The issue came to the forefront late last year after state officials received three complaints about students being restrained or confined alone in small rooms. The department cited two schools for violating the rights of disabled students who were subjected to such treatment.

“The board wants to put something into regulatory language that not only protects students, but gives staff some guidelines,” Gross said.

The current draft of the regulation says restraint and seclusion “should be avoided to the greatest extent possible” and “should never be used except in situations where a child’s behavior poses imminent danger of serious physical harm to self or others.”

Boone County Schools Superintendent Randy Poe says it puts teachers in a bad position.

“From a teacher’s standpoint, the issue is that now I have more constraints and have to make a quick judgment in a rash circumstance, and any hesitation could cause harm to someone else,” he said. “And what that teacher does can be second-guessed by an attorney.”

No special laws for seniors’ drivers’ licenses

Question: The Gleaner ran a story this week concerning various states that have special driver’s license regulations for senior citizens, such as more vision testing or making seniors renew their licenses more frequently. Does Kentucky have such laws? — E.H., Henderson.

Answer: No.

“Aside from the minimum age for obtaining a license, Kentucky has no other driver’s license requirements that are based on age,” according to Chuck Wolfe, spokesman for the Kentucky Transportation Cabinet, an agency includes the state’s Division of Driver Licensing.

However, in Indiana, state law shortens the renewal period for driver’s licenses from the normal six years to three years beginning at age 75, according to Dennis L. Rosebrough, a spokesman for the Indiana Bureau of Motor Vehicles.

From age 85 and older, the renewal is every two years. A vision test is required in Indiana with all renewals, regardless of age.

Historic Henderson exhibit ongoing at library

Gleaner staff

An exhibit showcasing historic Henderson can be viewed in the gallery of the Ohio Township Central Library in Newburgh, Ind., through Sept. 30.

Titled “One Woman Show,” the exhibit is by local artist Pem Pfisterer Clark and features pen-and-ink and watercolor drawings of Henderson, pewter pieces, etchings and drawings on wood and ceramics featuring Henderson landmarks, all using Clark’s signature pointillism style of drawing.

Clark has worked as an art instructor for nearly 40 years and has taught scores of local children at Pem Pfisterer Clark Productions School of Art as well as having steadily produced her own art.

Her drawings have been on display in more than 17 countries which includes commissions from Boston University, the U.S. Senate and House chambers and the President’s Oval Office in Washington, D.C.

She also is known for a series of pen-and-ink drawings titled “Growing Together” which depicts following a child through adulthood, planting and harvesting a tobacco crop with his dad and eventually to the market to be sold.

Clark has produced art of many local homes, Henderson’s own public library, Union Station Depot, Central Park and many churches.

The exhibit is available to view during library hours, which are 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Thursday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Friday and Saturday and 1 to 5 p.m. Sunday.

The library is located at 4111 Lakeshore Drive in Newburgh.

Riverfront work closes streets

As a result of continuing riverfront work, two streets will be closed effective today for an indefinite period of time, according to the city of Henderson.

The affected streets are Seventh Street between Main and Merritt Drive, as well as the intersection of Merritt Drive and Sixth Street.

Local access will be provided to residents only.

Group seeks to halt bridge spending

LOUISVILLE—A group that opposes two new planned Ohio River bridges is asking a federal judge to force Indiana and Kentucky to halt spending on the bridges until a federal lawsuit challenging the $2.6 billion project is resolved.

The Coalition for the Advancement of Regional Transportation made the request Wednesday in a motion seeking an injunction filed in federal court in Louisville, Ky. It is the first injunction sought in the lawsuit.

The Courier-Journal of Louisville reports the coalition wants any spending stopped until a new environmental report is issued or U.S. District Judge John G. Heyburn II rules in the case. The group wants Heyburn to bar the states from “committing or obligating public funds” or entering into any contracts to clear trees or “any other site work” besides inspection and maintenance of the route of the eastern bridge.

Kentucky Transportation Cabinet spokesman Chuck Wolfe said in a statement that the agency will file a formal response to the group’s motion.

“But throughout this project, we have taken pains to ensure that all applicable laws were complied with,” Wolfe said.

Indiana Department of Transportation spokesman Will Wingfield said the agency does not comment on pending litigation.

The $2.6 billion project will build two bridges running between Kentucky and Indiana near Louisville and upgrade highway interchanges to ease traffic congestion around the Louisville metropolitan area, which includes parts of Southern Indiana.

Thieves abandon, wreck stolen trucks

MAYFIELD — Thieves in Western Kentucky didn’t have any trouble starting up a couple of semis and other large trucks that had keys left in them — but driving them turned out to be a different matter.

Kentucky State Police told WPSD-TV that the vehicles were taken from Crop Production Services in Graves County on Tuesday night and were found either wrecked or abandoned in different areas of town on Wednesday morning.

Police say the vehicles included two semi-trucks, a fertilizer truck and a two-ton flatbed truck.

“The way they found the keys in the vehicle like that, this was a crime of opportunity,” Kentucky State Police Trooper Jay Thomas said.

One semi was found in the middle of Kentucky 339, still running and with the flashers blinking.

Nearby resident Shawn Kelly says the truck was in a precarious location.

Just a little bit more and they could have been off the side of the hill there,” he said.

Police say the thieves didn’t leave everything behind. The company is still missing a white Ford F-250 pickup.

The incident is under investigation, but police haven’t made any arrests.

“It is a good day when we recover this, but it’ll be a better day when we apprehended the individuals responsible,” Thomas said.

The company told the station that it would be locking up keys from now on, as well as putting up a gate and adding surveillance cameras.

Pulaski coroner pleads guilty

SOMERSET — A county coroner in southern Kentucky has pleaded guilty to 26 counts of theft and agreed to step down from office.

The Commonwealth Journal reports Richard New entered into a plea agreement during a hearing Thursday in Pulaski Circuit Court. New, who has served as coroner for a decade, was accused of stealing about $60,000 over a nine-year period as the Lake Cumberland Funeral Home where he once worked. The charges did not stem from his role as coroner.

As part of the plea deal, New also agreed not to seek elected office again.

Under terms of the deal, he would avoid jail time as long as he meets terms set out in the agreement over the next five years.

Boy on ATV struck, killed in Lexington

LEXINGTON — A teenage boy has died after he rode his all-terrain vehicle on a street in Lexington where a pickup hit it.

WKYT-TV said the youth died at University of Kentucky Hospital following the Thursday night crash. Video shown by the TV station showed a smashed windshield on the truck, following the accident.

Police said the youth ran a stop sign and rode into the path of the truck.

The Fayette County coroner’s office identified the boy as 15-year-old Michael L. Sparks and said he died of multiple blunt-force trauma.

Police said counselors would be at the school where the boy was enrolled on Friday.

Politicians are in charge of government, not our lives

The brisk morning air smacks you in the face as you open the front door. You faintly remember the record-setting summer heat, which you now long for as you march to the curb to retrieve today's edition of The Gleaner.

While you know the results of the election, you did not bother to stay up to watch the victory speech. Nothing changes the fact that you and your wife must wake up before daylight and part ways as you head off to your jobs.

As you sit and sip your noticeably strong coffee, you only skim the headlines before flipping to the classifieds. The job listings are a carbon copy of the day before – and the day before.

After months of being bombarded by negative ads, a refreshing feeling resonates throughout your body as you watch a poorly produced used car commercial on the television.

And in this instance you realize that after months of campaigning, two conventions, three debates, hundreds of speeches, and millions of dollars later, the winner is irrelevant to your daily life.

It is understandable how we all get caught up with election-year promises. We desire to believe in the well-spoken candidate who pledges to waive a magic wand that only he possesses, instantly returning our country to the boom-days of our past.

The truth is that the inhabitant of the White House should not affect our desire to advance our lot in life. We must all do our part to invest in ourselves, and in doing so we improve the people around us – not only in our family, but also our community. And an investment does not necessarily have to be monetary. Anyone can visit a library and learn something useful or volunteer where help is needed and learn a new skill that could lead to a better paying job.

We must not allow our existence to be defined by the president, the economic situation, or other external matters. Politicians are in charge of our government, not our lives.

James Orrahood, Henderson

Party in tax case takes issue with newspaper's coverage

In your recent Sept. 9 article, “McColom wins, Phillips loses in net profits tax,” you reported that Phillips' federal law suit against the city defendants is still ongoing but you failed to report why he is still able to sue them. Truth be known, Phillips hasn't “lost” anything.

It would seem to me that “news” is worth being public knowledge and not be buried in the opinion page of the newspaper. If your readers remember, The Gleaner reported, in unanimously overturning Phillips' conviction the Kentucky Court of Appeals ruled on two points and two points only: that Phillips' constitutionally protected due process rights were violated because the city didn't appoint the required occupational license board of appeals in a meaningful, timely manner and that the commonwealth did not prove Phillips was required under the law to file a 2005 net profits return.

Judge Joseph H. McKinley, the federal judge in James Phillips' lawsuit against the city, has already ruled that the city violated both the Kentucky and U.S. Constitutions by attempting to collect the 2005 net profits tax in question, and that the city could not legally collect the tax Phillips supposedly failed to file a return and pay. Judge McKinley went on to rule that the city's decision to tax taxpayers differently violated the Kentucky and U.S. Constitutions' “equal protection under the law,” and he denied their motion to dismiss the city defendants in their individual capacity for that reason.

Despite these state and now federal court rulings, the city continues to waste taxpayers' money trying to claim they legally and constitutionally collected those taxes and that I'm not entitled to a refund of the 2005 net profits tax the city illegally, retroactively and unconstitutionally collected from my business in 2006.

My civil law suit against the City of Henderson and its Occupational License Board of Appeals is very much alive and is still pending, waiting on a new judge to be appointed because of my motion to recuse Judge Karen Wilson as the trial judge in my case.

With Judge McKinley's rulings, as a matter of law, there is no question in my mind that what both James Phillips and I have been saying over the past six years is very much newsworthy, yet The Gleaner fails to give my civil court case any coverage. The city has never denied my claims and has never responded to my law suit in violation of civil court rule. Not that they could respond because all along the city has always known that both Phillips and I were right!

Stay tuned, if my intuition is correct, very soon The Gleaner headline news, if you care to report the “news”, should read, “Phillips and Orrahood win, city loses net profits tax federal and state lawsuits”!

Republicans think Jesus should have been born in Caymans

Our Republican friends make believe that Christian people should act or react in certain ways. I ask them, if Jesus was on earth today would he support your cutting food stamps? Forty-seven percent of recipients are children.

Would Jesus be against health care? What about Republican efforts to destroy Medicare, Medicaid, and suppress the fundamental right to vote of the elderly, youth and minorities? What about equal pay for equal work?

Then Romney has threatened to destroy the Department of Housing and Urban Development and downsize the Department of Education.

The “nuns on the bus” have pointed out how wrong Ryan and Romney are. Still they plow ahead and expect the aforementioned groups to support them. Because we are old doesn't mean we're stupid. Women also will remember.

Isn't it a shame Mary and Joseph weren't able to hide money in overseas accounts? Jesus could have been born in the Cayman Islands.

Perhaps it's time to try giving GOP a chance to right the ship

Though it's true Obama didn't inherit a very “seaworthy vessel” in 2009, it's also true he apparently didn't do the best job of captaining that vessel in the four years he was at the helm.

Maybe it's time to see if Republicans can do any better.

If they do good, then it's good for the country. If they don't do any better than Obama, then Democrats can say, “I told you so.”

When Thomas Edison would try an experiment in creating a light bulb, and it didn't work, he would go on to try something else.

Henderson great town to live in, gets better all the time

I am amazed at the generosity of our town.

My husband and I moved to Henderson from Evansville. I retired and he wanted to work a little longer, so I went volunteering.

I traveled for a company that required looking the best you can so every time you traveled by land or air it was new outfit, of course. They probably didn't even notice. So I acquired enough clothes for a lifetime (maybe, weight up or down).

When I think of all the consignment shops in town along with the church organizations that do a great job, but to give merchandise to the people without spending money is something. Can't wear it, someone else can.

My stay in Henderson, I volunteer at Christian Outreach, Salvation Army (in Evansville and Henderson), Humane Society, etc. Wherever I was needed.

I have been in a situation to receive help when I could by living with relatives after my parents passed away and was fortunate to have them, but it's not the same. They didn't understand me (ha).

Again, Henderson you are a great town to live in and getting better all the time.

Riverfront money an attempt to buy votes by Sen. McConnell

Are politicians in Washington really interested in paying down the national debt? Interested in balancing the budget? If they were, they would do what is necessary to do so. Seems to me they are only interested in allocating money to projects they think will get (buy) them votes.

What other reason would Senator Mitch McConnell have for sending money (millions) to Henderson for “riverfront beautification”? He is trying to buy votes in a historically Democratic county for Republicans (himself included). He could care less what our riverfront looks like. It's all about money, politics and getting elected, or in his case re-elected.

I am all for riverfront beautification but it should have been done with local city and county money — not federal tax dollars or state tax money. Federal government should not be spending tax dollars on such projects. Not in Henderson or anywhere else in the world.

Also I hear McConnell sent $40 million dollars to Owensboro for their riverfront.

Just who is the real hero in killing of bin Laden?

It was not Obama who is the real hero in the capture of Osama bin Laden. A doctor in Pakistan named Shakil Afridi led our Navy Seal Team 6 to his whereabouts.

He did it by setting up a vaccination clinic close to where they expected Bin Laden was living. The doctor encouraged the children in that house to come and get vaccinated and when they did, he took DNA swabs from their mouth that proved that these children were direct relatives of Osama Bin Laden. This information led our Navy team to the capture of bin Laden.

Where is this man who helped our government now? He is in the Pakistan prison for the crime of treason. This man should get our help, but so far they have not!

Paul Ryan has a bill that will withhold all goods and foreign aid to Pakistan unless they release Dr. Shakil Afridi from prison.

Our country sends tax payers money of two billion dollars a year to Pakistan. When will America learn that you cannot buy good behavior? In the last 30 years our government has supported dictators of other countries with taxpayers' money. I think it is time that America learns we should not waste our money.

Dr. Afridi deserves honor and support from us. Why is not our government helping this hero?

Tell our Congress that this man deserves more than a home in prison. Dr. Afridi risked his life to help us so we ought to help him.

It's nice our government cares about less fortunate

My point of view: Sometimes odd things or people have a way of turning up from time to time. But this time the odd one seems to be running for the President of the United States of America, and seems to have a problem with the less fortunate using food stamps to make ends meet.

What Mr. Romney doesn't know is that the “food stamp people” pay income tax on the small salary they bring home that helps make ends meet with the stamps.

I think it is nice that we have a government that cares about the less fortunate, because all of us can't send our money to foreign banks and our children to the best schools. The Republicans want to use their power to take everything from the poor and give it to the rich. We can't pay $77,000.00 for a horse or build an elevator for our cars.

How about that for representing the American people?

HCHS band events show local young people at their finest

If the people of Henderson County would like to witness some amazing and talented young people, they need to make a point to come out and watch the Henderson County Colonel's Brigade & Guard. There are several local competitions left and they will perform as a host band on Sept. 29 at the Henderson Heritage Marching Invitational at Henderson County High School.

What an amazing thing it would be to have the stands of their next competition filled with Henderson folks wanting to support local students!

Youth pastors, business owners, church members, friends, family members and members of our community, please consider supporting our students. We are often confronted with statistics about young people that seem dismal. Romney knows nothing about foreign affairs or being jobless Isn't it interesting when Republicans talk about foreign affairs? Mitt was in France four years staying out of the armed forces, which were fighting in Vietnam. He recently tripped over his own feet in England.

Not to be outdone, Sarah Palin thought we should have better relations with the Queen of England. The Queen of England is a figurehead with no power.

Mitt's foreign affairs are probably enhanced by his shipping jobs overseas with Bain Capital. Does visiting his bank accounts by computer count? Both he and Palin know as much about foreign affairs “as a hog does Sunday.”

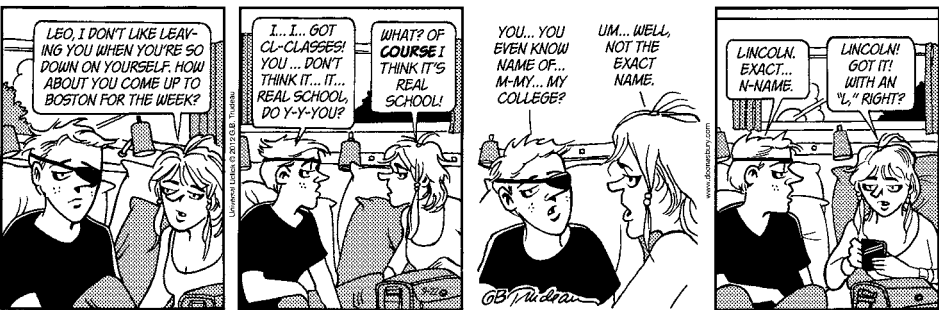

Then it's ironic that Mitt knows so much about jobs. He destroyed enough American jobs for his own enrichment. Did he see any employees with 30 years' experience telling their families, “Bain shut us down.”?

In Kansas City alone, Bain executives got $300,000 each. Their 750 employees lost their jobs. While so many former employees agonize and struggle, Mitt puts millions in foreign accounts and outsources jobs.

What are you hiding Mitt? Where are those tax returns? Tell us another lie. You told people in Iowa that you too were unemployed.

You forgot to mention the $20 million you drew from Bain Capital or the money in Cayman Islands, Swiss accounts, etc.

Siege had military-style tactics

By Matt Apuzzo
and Kimberly Dozier
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The heavily armed extremists who laid siege to the U.S. Consulate in Libya used military-style tactics that may have steered Americans toward a waiting ambush, U.S. officials said Friday as they pieced together details about how the compound was overrun.

U.S. intelligence indicates that 50 or more people, many of them masked, were responsible for the Sept. 11 assault on the U.S. diplomatic mission in Benghazi. Gun trucks provided added firepower. The attackers set up a perimeter, controlling access in and out of the compound. A first wave of attacks sent the Americans fleeing to a fallback building, where a second group of extremists beset them with precise mortar fire.

Intelligence reports were still coming in, but officials said that what may have initially seemed like a protest over an anti-Islam movie that had spun out of control now showed the hallmarks of a more sophisticated operation.

In a country coming off a civil war, a level of battlefield savvy does not prove the attack on the compound was planned well in advance. How much planning went into the operation and whether it could have been detected or prevented remain unanswered questions, officials said.

The attacks killed Ambassador Chris Stevens, diplomat Sean Smith and two former Navy SEALs, who U.S. officials said were in Libya on contract with the CIA. Stevens was visiting Benghazi from Tripoli to preside over the opening of a cultural center.

The officials spoke on condition of anonymity because they were not authorized to discuss intelligence reports. They stressed that even now authorities do not have a clear understanding of exactly what happened in Benghazi. FBI agents from New York and Washington were in Libya investigating the attack.

“What happened in Benghazi was a terrorist attack,” Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton said Friday. “And we will not rest until we have tracked down and brought to justice the terrorists who murdered four Americans.”

Officials have not singled out one responsible group, but have focused their attention on Ansar al-Shariah, a Libyan militant group led by a former detainee at the U.S. military-run prison in Guantánamo Bay, Cuba.

Pa. hostage-taker posts to Facebook, surrenders

By Joe Mandak

PITTSBURGH — Klein Michael Thaxton hadn’t been much of a Facebook devotee. He posted no status updates in two years on the social network. On Friday, though, he surfaced with a jarring post: “i cant take it no more im done bro.”

The 22-year-old Army veteran was on the 16th floor of a downtown Pittsburgh office building at the time, armed with a hammer and kitchen knife, and holding a businessman hostage, police said.

He surrendered after five hours. Neither he nor the hostage, business owner Charles Breitsman, was injured. But Thaxton’s real-time Facebook updates — coupled with online pleas by his friends to surrender — vividly illustrated the evolving challenges that confront police when social media plays an active role in a crime-in-progress.

them despairing and written in disjointed style.

Thaxton’s friends responded by urging him to end the situation peacefully.

Thaxton served as a private in the U.S. Army from December 2008 to June 2010. The Army said he trained at Fort Leonard Wood in Missouri before being assigned to Fort Riley in Kansas. He also has a criminal record, including a guilty plea to robbery earlier this year.

The hostage-taking was the latest example of how Facebook and other social media can inject the public into crime dramas in ways that were inconceivable in the pre-Internet age.

PUERTO RICO

Names of 55 Gitmo detainees released

SAN JUAN — The U.S. Justice Department has made public the names of 55 Guantanamo prisoners who have been approved for transfer to the custody of other countries.

The information has been sought by human rights organizations.

The U.S. previously did not publicize the names on the grounds that might “confuse, undermine, or jeopardize” diplomatic efforts with countries willing to accept detainees.

ACLU attorney Zachary Katznelson said the release is a partial victory for transparency. He notes the U.S. did not release the names of 31 other detainees also approved for transfer.

ISRAEL

Israeli soldier dead after shootout

JERUSALEM — A shootout along the Israel-Egypt border Friday, in which three Islamic militants and an Israeli soldier were killed, highlighted the growing threat posed by al-Qaida-inspired groups that have taken hold in the vast desert of the Sinai Peninsula.

The militants were heavily armed and wearing explosive belts when they infiltrated into Israeli territory and opened fire on soldiers protecting a team of workers building a border fence meant to buffer against such attacks, the Israeli military said.

It said the troops quickly returned fire, killing the militants and preventing a major terror attack.

During the exchange, Cpl. Netanel Yahalomi, 20, was shot in the head and later died of his wounds. Another soldier was moderately wounded.

SYRIA

Syria-bound plane barred by Iraq

Iraq prevented a North Korean plane from entering its airspace on suspicion it was carrying weapons for Syria, prompting praise from the U.S. on Friday but also demands for a ban of Iranian aircraft with similar suspect cargo.

Iraq’s decision could potentially close a supply line for Syrian President Bashar Assad’s embattled regime, which is fighting a civil war against rebels trying to topple him.

U.S. officials have accused Baghdad of allowing Iran — like North Korea an ally of Syria — to fly weapons to Syrian forces through Iraqi airspace, a charge Iraq has denied.

U.S. State Department spokesman Michael Lavallee called the move to ban the North Korean flight a “positive step.”

ETHIOPIA

Hopes abound with new prime minister

ADDIS ABABA — Ethiopia’s parliament swore in a new prime minister Friday in the U.S. ally’s first peaceful change of power in modern history, sparking hope for change in a nation that’s largely a one-party with a poor human rights record.

Prime Minister Hailemariam Desalegn succeeds former Prime Minister Meles Zenawi, who died Aug. 20 after ruling Ethiopia for more than two decades.

No vote was held Friday. Instead the ruling party, the Ethiopian Peoples’ Revolutionary Democratic Front — which controls 546 of the 547 seats in parliament — announced its choice for prime minister.

‘Prophet’ rallies in Pakistan turn into deadly day of fury

By Sebastian Abbot
Associated Press

ISLAMABAD — Pakistan’s “Day of Love for the Prophet” turned into a deadly day of gunfire, tear gas and arson.

Thousands angered by an anti-Muslim film ignored pleas for peaceful rallies and rampaged in several Pakistani cities Friday in battles with police that killed 19 people and touched off criticism of a government decision to declare a national holiday to proclaim devotion for the Prophet Muhammad.

The film, which was produced in the United States and denigrates the prophet, has outraged many in the Muslim world in the 10 days since it attracted attention on the Internet, and there were new, mostly peaceful protest marches in a half-dozen countries from Asia to the Middle East.

But it is Pakistan that has seen the most sustained violence, driven by a deep well of anti-American sentiment and a strong cadre of hard-line Islamists who benefit from stoking anger at the U.S.

At least 49 people — including the U.S. ambassador to Libya — have died in violence linked to the film around the world.

Analysts accused the Pakistani government of pandering to these extremists by declaring Friday to be an official holiday — calling it a “Day of Love for the Prophet.” Officials urged peaceful protests, but critics said the move helped unleash the worst violence yet caused by the film, titled “Innocence of Muslims.”

In addition to those killed, nearly 200 others were injured as mobs threw stones and set fire to cars and movie theaters, and battled with police who responded with tear gas and gunfire.

“The people were just waiting for a trigger,” said Imtiaz Gul, director of the Islamabad-based Center for Research and Security Studies.

In an attempt to tamp down the anger, the U.S. Embassy in Islamabad purchased spots on Pakistani TV on Thursday that featured denunciations of the video by President Barack Obama and Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton.

But their comments, which were subtitled in Urdu, the main Pakistani language, apparently did little to moderate the outrage that filled the country’s streets.

U.S. to take Iran group off terror list

WASHINGTON — The Obama administration will remove from the U.S. terrorism list an Iranian militant group formerly allied with Saddam Hussein, officials said Friday, describing a move that will infuriate Tehran and end years of high-profile campaigning by the group.

Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton will notify Congress of her intent later Friday, the officials said. A court order had given her until Oct. 1 to make a decision about the Mujahedeen-e-Khalq, or MEK. The officials spoke on condition of anonymity because they weren’t authorized to speak about the matter.

Clinton’s decision comes just days after the last big batch of the Iranian exiles reluctantly left their decades-old paramilitary base in northeastern Iraq, relocating for now to a refugee camp outside Baghdad.

Corruption trial opens for ex-mayor

DETROIT — Former Detroit Mayor Kwame Kilpatrick repeatedly stuffed his bank account and paid off credit cards with hundreds of thousands of dollars in cash, the illegal fruit of a crooked politician who took bribes and left taxpayers “holding the short end of the stick,” a prosecutor told jurors Friday at the start of a corruption trial.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Mark Chutkow gave jurors a 40-minute preview of what they’ll see and hear in the months ahead in a case that could send Kilpatrick to prison for more than 10 years.

He described Kilpatrick as a young, enthusiastic state lawmaker of modest means who was elected mayor in 2001 and then set off on a sweeping scheme to enrich himself through extortion and bribes.

Attack on U.S. in Libya fuels backlash

By Maggie Michael
Associated Press

BENGHAZI, Libya — Tens of thousands of Libyans marched to the gates of one of the country’s strongest armed Islamic extremist groups Friday, demanding it disband, as the attack that killed the U.S. ambassador and four other Americans sparked a public backlash against militias that run rampant in the country and defy the country’s new, post-Moammar Gadhafi leadership.

For many Libyans, last week’s attack on the U.S. Consulate in the eastern city of Benghazi was the last straw with one of the biggest problems Libya has faced since Gadhafi’s ouster and death around a year ago — the multiple mini-armies that with their arsenals of machine guns and rocket-propelled grenades are stronger than the regular armed forces and police.

The militias, a legacy of the ragtag popular forces that fought Gadhafi’s regime, tout themselves as protectors of Libya’s revolution, providing security where police cannot. But many say they act like gangs, detaining and intimidating rivals and carrying out killings. Militias made up of Islamic radicals are notorious for attacks on Muslims who don’t abide by their hard line ideology. Officials and witnesses say fighters from one Islamic militia, Ansar al-Shariah, led the Sept. 11 attack on the Benghazi consulate.

Some 30,000 people filled a broad boulevard as they marched along a lake in central Benghazi on Friday to the gates of the headquarters of Ansar al-Shariah.

From macho to makeup

■ South Korean men spend for the perfect face

By Foster Klug
Associated Press

SEOUL, South Korea — Cho Won-hyuk stands in front of his bedroom mirror and spreads dollops of yellow-brown makeup over his forehead, nose, chin and cheeks until his skin is flawless. Then he goes to work with a black pencil, highlighting his eyebrows until they're thicker, bolder.

"Having a clean, neat face makes you look sophisticated and creates an image that you can handle yourself well," the 24-year-old college student said. "Your appearance matters, so when I wear makeup on special occasions, it makes me more confident."

Cho's meticulous efforts to paint the perfect face are not unusual in South Korea. This socially conservative, male-dominated country, with a mandatory two-year military conscription for men, has become the male makeup capital of the world.

South Korean men spent $495.5 million on skin care last year, accounting for nearly 21 percent of global sales, according to global market research firm Euromonitor International. That makes it the largest market for men's skin care in the world, even though there are only about 19 million men in South Korea. Amorepacific, South

Cho Won-Hyuk, a 24-year-old student, uses an eyebrow pencil at his home in Anyang, South Korea.

Korea's biggest cosmetics company, estimates the total sales of men's cosmetics in South Korea this year will be more than $885 million.

The metamorphosis of South Korean men from macho to makeup over the past decade or so can be partly explained by fierce competition for jobs, advancement and romance in a society where, as a popular catchphrase puts it, "appearance is power." Women also have a growing expectation men will take the time and effort to pamper their skin.

Evidence of this new direction in South Korean masculinity is easy to find. In a crowded Seoul cafe, a young woman takes some lipstick out of her purse and casually applies it to her male companion's lips as they talk.

"I can understand why girls don't like to go outside without makeup — it makes a big difference," said Cho Gil-nam, a tall, stocky 27-year-old insurance fraud investigator in Seoul.

South Korean men are barraged daily with messages in popular media suggesting that flawless skin is a crucial part of any plan to get ahead at work and romance.

"In this society, people's first impressions are very important. A man's skin is a big part of that impression, so I take care of my skin," said Kim Deuk-ryong, a 20-year-old student.

It wasn't always this way.

In 2002, large numbers were attracted to a hero of South Korea's World Cup soccer team, Ahn Jung-hwan, who became a leading member of the so-called "flower men" — a group of exceptionally good-looking, smooth-skinned, fashionable sports stars and celebrities who found great success selling male cosmetics.

Men everywhere began striving to look like them, with the encouragement of the women around them, and a trend was born.

Shut up! Speech-jamming device tops Ig Nobel winners

By Mark Pratt
Associated Press

BOSTON — For anyone who ever has been tired of listening to someone drone on and on and on, two Japanese researchers have the answer.

The SpeechJammer, a device that disrupts a person's speech by repeating his or her own voice at a delay of a few hundred milliseconds, was named Thursday as a 2012 winner of the Ig Nobel prize — an award sponsored by the Annals of Improbable Research magazine for weird and humorous scientific discoveries.

The echo effect of the device is just annoying enough to get someone to sputter and stop.

Actually, the device created by Kazutaka Kurihara and Koji Tsukada is meant to help public speakers by alerting them if they are speaking too quickly or have taken up more than their allotted time.

"This technology ... could also be useful to ensure speakers in a meeting take turns appropriately, when a particular participant continues to speak, depriving others of the opportunity to make their fair contribution," said Kurihara, of the National Institute of Advanced Industrial Science and Technology in Japan.

Still, winning an Ig Nobel in acoustics for the device's other more dubious purpose is cool, too.

"Winning an Ig Nobel has been my dream as a mad scientist," he said.

As usual, the ersatz Nobels were handed out by real Nobel laureates, including 2007 economics winner Eric Maskin, who also was the prize in the "Win a Date with a Nobel Laureate" contest.

Other winners feted

Thursday at Harvard University's opulent Sanders Theatre included Dutch researchers who won the psychology prize for studying why leaning to the left makes the Eiffel Tower look smaller; four Americans who took the neuroscience prize for demonstrating sophisticated equipment can detect brain activity in dead fish; a British-American team that won the physics prize for explaining how and why ponytails bounce; and the U.S. General Accountability Office, which won the literature prize for a report about reports.

Rouslan Krechetnikov, an engineering professor at the University of California Santa Barbara, and graduate student Hans Meyer took home the fluid dynamics prize for research into the sloshing that goes on in coffee cup as it's carried.

Louvre wing showcases Islamic art

By Thomas Adamson
Associated Press

PARIS — In its boldest development in a generation, the Louvre Museum has a new wing dedicated to Islamic art, a nearly $130 million project that comes at a tense time between the West and the Muslim world.

Louvre curators tout their new Islamic Art department, which took 11 years to build and opens to the public today, as a way to help bridge cultural divides. They say it offers a highbrow and respectful counterpart to the recent unflattering depictions of the Prophet Muhammad in Western media that have sparked protests by many Muslims.

Still, one of the Louvre's own consultants acknowledged some Muslims could be "shocked" by three images of Muhammad with his face exposed in the new wing. Many Muslims believe the prophet should not be depicted at all — even in a flattering way — because it might encourage idolatry.

The galleries provide a needed showcase to one of the West's most extensive Islamic art collections, some 18,000 artifacts that range from the seventh century to the 19th century.

Sophie Makariou, head of the Louvre's Islamic art department, hopes the wing will teach about tolerance and diversity.

"I like the idea of showing the other side of the coin," said Makariou, standing at a wall decorated with colorful, flower-patterned tiles from the Ottoman Empire in the 16th century. "We are talking about a diverse world that goes from the Atlantic, Spain and Morocco to India. It brings complexity.

"We are suffering from simplistic views on the Islamic world. (Some) would make us believe that there is just one Islam, which is just not true."

An intricately engraved bronze lion from 13th century Spain stands proudly alongside a rare modeled-stucco head of a prince from medieval Iran.

French President Francois Hollande attended an opening ceremony Tuesday, calling it a "political gesture in the service of respect for peace." Saudi Prince Waleed Bin Talal and the president of Azerbaijan accompanied him.

More cyber courses offered free

■ 17 leading universities join online platform

By Terence Chea
Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — Seventeen leading universities in the U.S. and abroad will start offering free cyber courses through the online education platform Coursera, the company said Wednesday.

The announcement by Mountain View-based Coursera underscores the rapid expansion of so-called MOOCs, or massive open online courses, that are reshaping the higher education landscape.

Coursera, a for-profit company started by two computer science professors at Stanford University, now will offer more than 200 courses from 33 institutions open to anyone with Internet access. Officials said the website has registered 1.3 million students around the world.

The new Coursera partners include Brown, Columbia, Emory, Vanderbilt and Wesleyan universities, as well as Berklee College of Music and Mount Sinai School of Medicine.

The foreign universities added are Hebrew University of Jerusalem, University of British Columbia, University of London, University of Melbourne, and Hong Kong University of Science and Technology, Coursera said.

The new additions include five public institutions: Ohio State University, the University of Florida, University of Pittsburgh, University of Maryland and University of California, Irvine.

"As boundaries and limitations begin to disappear in the world of higher education, Coursera is clearly an up-and-coming player on the global stage, and we look forward to partnering with them," University of Florida President Bernie Machen said in a statement.

EdX, a competing online platform founded by Harvard University and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, announced this month it will start giving students the option of taking proctored final exams, which will allow them to earn independently validated certificates to show potential employers or educational institutions.

WHAT DOES THE BIBLE SAY:

“WILL ALL BELIEVE”

One of the miracles of Jesus was the raising of Lazarus from the dead in John 11. Note the response of the onlookers (Vs. 45-46). "Then many of the Jews which came to Mary, and had seen the things which Jesus did, believed on him. But some of them went their ways to the Pharisees, and told them what things Jesus had done." The Pharisees response was that Jesus must be stopped or else all men would believe on him (Vs. 48). I would certainly like to think that would have been true but it was not to be, then or now. Jesus knew that most would not believe and obey His will. The parable of the sower (Luke 8:4-15) illustrates this truth. Jesus simple statement of the judgment scene is another clear indication that most will not believe nor be willing to obey his commands (Matthew 7:13-14). Our Lord gave sufficient evidence of His power and passion over and for mankind. The verdict was conclusive-Jesus was the promised Messiah. The Pharisees answer to Jesus' great works was to put him to death (John 11:53). What is your answer? We will either accept or reject Jesus for there is no middle ground. Jesus concluded one of his sermons in Matthew 7 with an illustration of a wise and foolish builder. The wise builder was the one who heard the sayings of Jesus and obeyed them (Vs. 26). All won't believe but you can!

Apple fans line up early for new iPhone

■ Latest version is 'a little treat' for smartphone users

By Kelvin Chan
Associated Press

In a now familiar global ritual, Apple fans jammed shops across the globe to pick up the tech juggernaut's latest iPhone.

Eager buyers formed long lines Friday at Apple Inc. stores in Asia, Europe and North America to be the first to get their hands on the latest version of the smartphone.

In New York, several hundred people lined up outside Apple's Fifth Avenue store. Jimmy Peralta, a 30-year-old business management student, waited three hours before getting the chance to buy his new gadget. Was it worth the wait?

"Definitely," he said, noting the new phone's larger screen and lighter weight compelled him to upgrade from the iPhone 4. "A little treat for me on a Friday morning, why not? Why not be part of something fantastic? It's just such a smart phone it does all the thinking for you, you can't get any easier than that."

Catherlyne Caveed, 23, was in line at a Verizon store in the Queens borough of New York. An iPhone 4 user, she had no regrets about skipping last year's model, the iPhone 4S. The only real upgrade in the 4S, she said, was Siri, the voice-controlled "personal assistant."

"The 4S looked the same as the 4," Caveed said. With the 5, "everything is different — even the headphones."

Apple's stock closed up $1.39, or 0.2 percent, at $700.09.

The iPhone 5 is thinner, lighter, has a taller screen, faster processor, updated software and can work on faster mobile networks.

The handset has become a hot seller despite a new map app early users deemed inferior to Google Maps.

Apple received 2 million orders in the first 24 hours of announcing its release date, more than twice the number for the iPhone 4S in the same period when that phone launched a year ago.

In a sign of the intense demand, police in Osaka, Japan, were investigating the theft of nearly 200 iPhones 5s, including 116 from one shop alone, Kyodo News reported. In London, police sought help finding a man wanted in connection with the theft of 252 iPhone 5s from a shop in Wimbledon early Friday morning.

BlackBerry out in Europe, Africa

The Associated Press

TORONTO — The chief executive of struggling BlackBerry-maker Research In Motion apologized Friday after an outage in Europe and Africa interrupted service for customers on the very day Apple Inc. released its new iPhone 5.

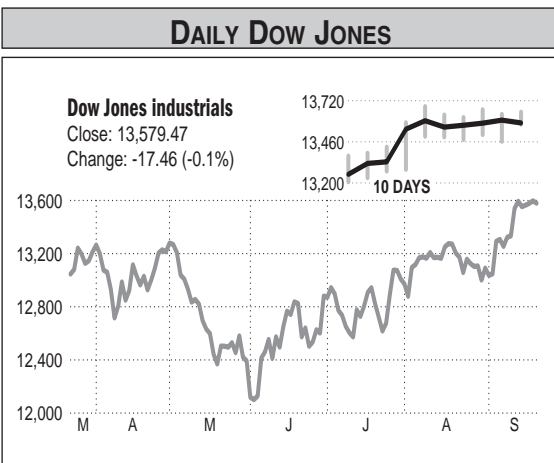

BlackBerry announced the issues in postings on Facebook and Twitter on Friday, and later said it resolved the issue. The service disruption lasted up to three hours for some BlackBerry users in those regions. RIM shares fell 6.5 percent, or 45 cents, to $6.45 in trading on the Nasdaq.

Chief Executive Thorsten Heins said up to 6 percent of RIM's users might have been affected. He said the company is conducting a full analysis and will report back. RIM initially said the outage included the Middle East, but RIM spokeswoman Amy Jones later said it did not.

in the affirmative, he had them ride their bikes through the parking lot behind the school.

The route was outfitted with stop signs, a railway crossing, and various cones.

Students also were taught the importance of riding close to the edge of the road so they wouldn't get hit by motor vehicles.

"It's hard to fix your brain," Beckhart said, regarding the potential for serious injury when bicycle rules aren't followed.

Kayce Glassco, 10, said she thought the program was fun. She rides her bike around her Papaw and Grandma's neighborhood.

"I didn't know how to do the right and stop signals," she added.

The program was sponsored by the East Heights Elementary Family Resource Center and was brought to East Heights by coordinator Melissa Walker.

Assistant Principal Wilson said she heard students who had completed the program say in passing they were having fun.

Two students even told her, "I have to make sure I look before I go," which she described as a life lesson extending beyond bike riding.

"Look before you leap," she said.

Fifth-grader Emily Bird added, "it was exciting. I never get to ride bikes in school."

SAFE RIDING

Here are descriptions of how bicyclists should signal turns and indicate they intend to slow or stop. State law requires hand signals within about 100 feet of the bicyclist's turn:

- To turn left: Extend left arm straight out.
- To turn right: Left arm should be crooked up at the elbow.
- To slow or stop: Left arm should be down with palm backward.
- Bicyclists are not required to signal when doing so could endanger the safe operation of their bike. Examples would be riding over rough pavement or through debris.

Thumbs-up for Lane

the 20 years before 2010, the Romneys paid an average annual effective rate of 20.2 percent, never lower than 13.66 percent. On average, middle-income families — those making from $50,000 to $75,000 a year — pay 12.8 percent of their income in federal taxes, according to Congress' Joint Committee on Taxation. But many pay a higher rate.

The former Massachusetts governor, whose wealth is estimated at perhaps $250 million, is aggressively competing with Obama for the support of middle class voters.

Obama's own tax return for last year showed he and his wife, Michelle, paid $162,074 in federal taxes on $789,674 in adjusted gross income, an effective tax rate of 20.5 percent. Their income plunged from $1.7 million in 2010, with declining sales of the president's books. In 2009, the Obamas reported income of $5.5 million, fueled by the best-selling books.

The Romneys' tax bill could have been lower.

For the year, they claimed a deduction for $2.25 million of their $4,021 million in charitable contributions, said Brad Malt, trustee of the candidate's blind trust.

The Romneys gave $2.6 million in cash to the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, the documents show. They gave just more than $2 million in noncash charitable contributions — including donations of stock holdings in Domino's Pizza, Dunkin' Donuts and Warner Chilcott — to a family trust.

They could have claimed more in deductions, Malt said, but the couple "limited their deductions of charitable contributions to conform to the governor's statement (in August, based on the January estimate of income, he paid at least 13 percent in income taxes in each of the last 10 years."

Romney seemed to be painted into a corner by that statement, which came in reaction to Democratic Senate Majority Republican presidential candidate Mitt Romney campaigns Friday in Las Vegas.

Leader Harry Reid's claim to have heard that the Republican had paid no taxes in some years.

Romney surely will be reminded by the Democrats he also said in August, defending his right to pay no more taxes than he owed: "I don't pay more than are legally due, and frankly, if I had paid more than are legally due, I don't think I'd be qualified to become president."

He appears to be physically qualified by any measure. The campaign released a separate report Friday — by Romney's longtime physician, Dr. Randall Gaz of Massachusetts General Hospital — that said he is healthy and ready to meet the rigorous demands of the presidency.

The report said Romney's heart appears healthy, and he takes a baby aspirin and medicine to treat high cholesterol. He doesn't smoke or drink. And his resting heart rate is a low 40 beats per minute, in the range of well-trained athletes and reminiscent of President George W. Bush, who also had a low resting rate.

Romney stands 6-1½ and weighs 184 pounds.

As for his taxes, the Romneys' 2011 rate was slightly above the 13.9 percent effective rate they paid for 2010 when their federal tax bill was about $3 million.

They paid federal taxes of $1,935,708 on income of $13,696,951 for last year, according to the returns filed Friday with the Internal Revenue Service. They obtained a filing extension beyond the usual April 15 tax deadline. His campaign earlier estimated he would pay about $3.2 million in taxes for the year, well above the $1.9 million actually paid.

Most of Romney's income is from investments held in a blind trust, and campaign aides have stressed he makes no decisions on how his money is invested.

The Romneys reported $6.8 million in capital gains, such as from the sale of stocks and other securities, and $6.37 million from dividends and taxable interest.

“I've never taken a prescription drug in my life and I've been in the hospital only one time for an operation. I can pick up 50 pounds and it not bother me. I could drive a truck and a trailer if I could see.”

Emmett Beasley of Beals, on living to be 100

sweater he earned for playing basketball there.

Beasley became the first member of his family to go to college, hitchhiking to Bowling Green to spend a year at Western Kentucky State Teachers College.

He was among 16 young men who were housed in a newly built dairy barn on a college-owned farm where they gathered up chicken eggs each morning, looked after hogs and performed farm chores on Saturdays.

"They didn't have but two dormitories, and all the people who had money got them," leaving Beasley and his buddies sleeping in the barn. "That's OK. I enjoyed it."

He came home and married Bessie Sue Tackett in 1932. He began working for his uncle, John Mitchell, who operated a store in the Daviess County community of Stanley.

Beasley's job was to drive a truck, picking up merchandise such as Coca-Cola as well as 100-pound blocks of ice; he earned $1 a day.

When not doing that, he hauled truckloads of corn to Owensboro Grain.

The Depression brought hard times for much of America. But farm families such as the Beasleys were long accustomed to raising their own food — meat, milk, fruits and vegetables — and knew how to store food long before electricity and refrigeration found their way to the farm.

When he was growing up, his family raised so many vegetables that it had enough to meet its needs, with enough left over to sell to the Heinz tomato ketchup plant in Henderson. His mother dried peaches and apples; soaked corn in lye to make hominy; and made pickles by the barrel.

Young Emmett would sell pickles to Spottsville School for 20 cents a gallon.

The family milked cows and took the milk can to Beals, where a train would pick it up and haul it to a dairy.

During the Depression, the Beasleys would bury cabbages and potatoes in a thick bed of straw and cover it with dirt to prevent it from freezing, ensuring food through the winter and into the following spring.

Living and working in Stanley, his home wasn't directly impacted by the Great Flood of 1937. But he has stories about pulling a small boat through the waves of floodwaters to either rescue family members from their flooded homes or return them to their homes before the waters fully receded and dirt roads would be impassible for weeks.

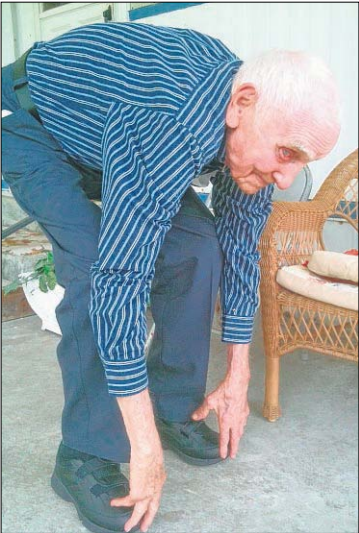

On one such mission, nightfall came before they reached their destination and family members had to endure a miserable night in a corncrib.

In 1937, Beasley opened a store in Beals — one of four in that little community at the time. With rural roads beginning to improve, some people "got to going to Henderson" to take advantage of low prices advertised at the chain of Red Front supermarkets.

Unfazed, Beasley matched the low prices on items advertised by Red Front.

"You can get things as cheap at Emmett's as you can there," he would say. He compensated for lowering those prices by quietly marking up other goods a little.

"I was a trader all my life," he said. "I traded hogs, cows and horses at the grocery store."

CHUCK STINNETT / THE GLEANER

Even at 100, Emmett Beasley can touch his toes. Today, family and friends will celebrate his life at a barbecue at Reed.

For many years, he hauled grain for future Henderson mayor Maurice Galloway; for a while, he drove to Florida to buy produce that he hauled back to sell at one of his two produces houses in Henderson.

He worked on paddle wheel towboats on the Green River, traveling upstream Bowling Green on the Barren River and to natural asphalt mines along the Nolin River near Mammoth Cave.

On the Nolin, the lock chambers were so small that the barge and towboat had to be separated and locked through one at a time. "We had to pull the barge out by hand," Beasley said.

Later, he bought a bulldozer and started an excavating business.

Over the years, he sold various businesses, including the dozer business and a truck with an established commercial route. "I put a lot of people into business," Beasley said.

In the meantime, he farmed near Beals. In the early years, he guided mule-drawn plows to break ground for planting.

"I'll bet you I've walked 1,000 miles plowing ground," he said.

But in the 1950s and 1960s, his farms were mechanized. "I farmed at least 1,000 acres at one point in time," he said.

"He was a mover and shaker" in those days, his great-nephew Stan Williams said. "When new equipment came out, he had to have it."

"I'd always get the latest stuff," Beasley acknowledged. "I was the first one in a country store (in this area) to have a refrigerated case."

The one constant was the unending quest to make a living by whatever means was available.

"The good Lord just put things along my way," Beasley said.

Williams puts it another way: "All they had was work."

Beasley never lost his love for trading.

In later years, he would go to auctions to buy merchandise that he could resell. He was a vendor at the big flea market at Greenville for so many years that when he turned 85, the proprietors stopped charging him rent.

He and his wife (who bore him a child, David, in 1959) were married for 76 years until her death last Jan. 19 at age 93.

"People ask, 'How do you live with a woman so long?'" Beasley said. "I say, 'You learn to say, 'Yes m'am.'"

They also ask Beasley the secret to his long life.

Some of that can be credited to the durable stock of his family.

His mother lived to almost 99, while his sister Cornelia lived to 96 and his brother Jay (or J.L.) reached 92; another brother, James, is 96.

"I've never taken a prescription drug in my life," he said. "and I've been in the hospital only one time for an operation," but he got to feeling better and left the hospital before the "knife-happy" surgeon got him in the operating room.

"I can pick up 50 pounds and it not bother me," and he can bend to touch his toes.

Only his eyes are failing him. "I could drive a truck and a trailer if I could see," Beasley said.

But more significant in his life, Beasley said, is his faith. "Put everything to the Lord. 'Seek first the kingdom of God,'" he said, quoting from the Gospel of Mark.

A devout Christian, he regularly quotes Scripture from the Bible he's been unable to see well enough to read for the past decade. He prays regularly and asks the blessing at every meal, including when he's eating alone.

And while he denies claims that he is a healer, "People call me now and I pray for them on the telephone."

He credits his mother for his firm faith.

"She was a saint," he said. "When preachers from churches would go visit her, they'd come away blessed."

Being raised by her, he said, blessed him.

"The Bible says, 'Train up a child in the way he should go: and when he is old, he will not depart from it.' And it says, 'Honor thy father and thy mother, that thy days may be long upon the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee.'"

"Those" Beasley declared, "are promises from God."

Lady Cols home to take on Reitz

Henderson County is at home today to take on Evansville Reitz. The junior varsity game starts at 10 a.m. with the varsity contest to follow at 11:30.

Reds' Baker misses third straight game

CINCINNATI — Manager Dusty Baker wasn't with the Cincinnati Reds as they closed in on the NL Central title on Friday, forced to miss a third straight game because of an irregular heartbeat.

Bench coach Chris Speier ran the club for the opener of a series against the Los Angeles Dodgers. The Reds' number for clinching the NL Central was two heading into Friday's games.

The 63-year-old Baker was hospitalized in Chicago on Wednesday because of symptoms from an irregular heartbeat that he's had for some time. The Reds swept the series, putting themselves in position to clinch their second division title in three years at home over the weekend.

Time Warner adds NFLN, report says

NEW YORK — A person with knowledge of the deal says Time Warner Cable has agreed to carry NFL Network.

The person spoke on condition of anonymity Friday because the deal had not been signed. The news was first reported by Bloomberg.

The nation's fourth-largest pay TV signal provider, with about 12 million homes, had been the lone holdout among the top nine after Cablevision announced a deal in August.

NFL Network began airing regular-season games in 2006 and expanded from only the second half of each season to a full season this year. The NFL initially feuded with large cable companies over adding the channel but had gradually increased its availability.

Cabrera DQed in NL batting race

NEW YORK — A person familiar with the discussions tells The Associated Press that Melky Cabrera has been disqualified from the National League batting title at his own request.

The person says Cabrera asked the players' association to convey his desire to the commissioner's office and that an agreement to make him ineligible was reached Friday. The person spoke on condition of anonymity because no announcement had been made.

Major League Baseball could not unilaterally disqualify Cabrera. It could change the batting title rules for this year only with an agreement from the union.

Serving a 50-game suspension, the San Francisco Giants slugger entered Friday with a league-leading .346 average, seven points ahead of Pittsburgh's Andrew McCutchen.

Jets' Bart Scott, reporter in fracas

FLORHAM PARK, N.J. — New York Jets linebacker Bart Scott and a reporter needed to be separated by a media relations staffer after the two got into an argument when the reporter tried to take a picture of him.

Scott, who has refused to do interviews since Week 1, was on his way out of the locker room and speaking to a female reporter Friday when Dan Leberfeld of Jets Confidential magazine approached the linebacker to snap a picture with his phone.

Scott asked Leberfeld why he was taking another picture of him — after Leberfeld did the same Wednesday, upsetting another female reporter.

Reds fail to clinch crown

■ They fall to Dodgers 3-1 in 10 innings

Wire reports

Matt Kemp's two-out single with the bases loaded in the 10th inning sent the Los Angeles Dodgers to a 3-1 victory Friday night that denied the Cincinnati Reds' first chance to clinch the NL Central.

The Dodgers won for only the fifth time in 15 games, moving two games behind St. Louis for the final NL wild card. They also trail Milwaukee by a half-game.

Cincinnati was trying to lock up its second division title in three years without manager Dusty Baker, still in a Chicago hospital with an irregular heartbeat.

The Dodgers loaded the bases off Sam LeCure (3-3). Sean Marshall got ahead 0-2 in the count to Kemp, who singled to right for his third hit.

Ronald Belisario (8-1) pitched two perfect innings for Los Angeles, fanning five.

■ Phillies 6, Braves 2: Kevin Frandsen hit one of Philadelphia's four solo homers to back Kyle Kendrick, and the Phillies inched closer in the NL playoff race with a 6-2 victory over the Atlanta Braves on Friday night.

Ryan Howard, Carlos Ruiz and Chase Utley also went deep for the resurgent Phillies, who pulled within three games of St. Louis for the league's second wild-card spot with their fourth straight win. Milwaukee and Los Angeles also stand in Philadelphia's way with 11 games remaining.

Despite the loss, the Braves are in excellent position to secure a post-season berth. Their magic number for clinching a spot was five, pending the outcome of the Milwaukee-Washington game.

The victory combined with a St. Louis loss moved the Brewers within 1 1-2 games of the Cardinals for the final wild card berth in the National League.

Held to one run over eight innings against Nationals starter Edwin Jackson, the Brewers scored three against Clippard (2-6). Norichika Aoki led off with bunt single, took second on a passed ball by catcher Jesus Flores and moved to third on Rickie Weeks' fly ball out.

■ Mets 7, Marlins 3: The New York Mets managed to avoid falling into last place in the NL East, beating the cellar-dwelling Miami Marlins 7-3 behind a big game by Scott Hairston.

New York, which also got a solo homer from Ike Davis, had lost nine straight at home since beating Houston on Aug. 26. The Mets won for only the fifth time in their last 30 games at Citi Field and ended a team-record streak of 16 home games without scoring more than three runs.

Hairston hit a two-run homer and an RBI triple.

■ Yankees 2, Athletics 1: Russell Martin led off the bottom of the 10th inning with a homer off Sean Doolittle, and the AL East-leading New York Yankees beat the Oakland Athletics 2-1 Friday night for their sixth straight win.

Brandon Moss hit a towering home run to right field with one out in the ninth inning off Rafael Soriano to spoil a dominant three-hit outing for CC Sabathia to tie it 1-all, stunning the boisterous crowd of 40,759 into silence. It was Soriano's fourth blown save in 46 chances.

■ Orioles 4, Red Sox 2: Matt Wieters drove in three runs, Miguel Gonzalez pitched 6 1-3 solid innings and the Baltimore Orioles remained one game behind the first-place New York Yankees in the AL East with a 4-2 win over the Boston Red Sox on Friday night.

The Yankees beat Oakland 2-1 in 10 innings. The Orioles broke a tie with the Athletics for the top wild-card spot. All three teams have 12 games remaining.

Jon Lester (9-13) lost for the first time in his 21 career starts against the Orioles. He had been 14-0, the longest winning streak against the Orioles franchise for a pitcher at the start of his career since at least 1901.

■ Rays 12, Blue Jays 1: James Shields pitched seven shutout innings and Tampa Bay's suddenly potent offense scored runs in bunches Friday night to help the Rays continue an uphill battle to remain in playoff contention with a 12-1 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays.

Ben Zobrist and Jose Molina homered in support of Shields (15-9), who limited the Blue Jays to six singles and struck out nine to reach 200 for the second straight year. He fanned J.P. Arencibia leading off the second inning, giving the Rays the American League single-season record for strikeouts.

Dale Jr.: Crew shakeup no problem

Sprint Cup.

"I'm not in a position in my life to invest my focus in it with everything else I've got going on — driving race cars being the priority. And I won't ever do that. I won't overload myself or take away. Especially with the opportunity I've got right now to win the Chase, win the championship. I won't let anything take away from that."

■ Qualifying: Jeff Gordon will start from the pole for the NASCAR race in New Hampshire on Sunday as he tries to move up in the Chase for the Sprint Cup.

Gordon ran a lap at 134.911 mph in qualifying Friday. Kyle Busch was second, at 134.753 mph.

in the Sprint Cup standings. Points leader Brad Keselowski qualified 15th.

Denny Hamlin was 32nd in qualifying after his crew used the wrong pressure in his tires. The deepest starting spot for a race winner in New Hampshire is 38th by Jeff Burton in 1999.

Jose Wise was disqualified from the race because a post-qualifying inspection showed improper gas pressure in his rear shocks.

■ Nationwide: Ricky Stenhouse Jr. didn't know he had been around the Nationwide Series this long.

Told on Friday that the Kentucky 300 would mark his 100th career start in NASCAR's second-tier circuit, the 24-year-old defending series champion and current points leader laughed. Stenhouse was so focused on racing that he never kept count.

At Kentucky Speedway on Saturday, he'll be concentrating on staying ahead of Elliott Sadler. Stenhouse took over first place last week with a victory at Chicago and holds a nine-point edge with seven races remaining.

He has been strong on the 1.5-mile oval, finishing eighth in June after two ninth-place runs.

Stenhouse hopes this milestone start culminates in a breakthrough victory that leads to another championship.

■ Trucks: James Buescher completed a NASCAR Trucks season sweep at Kentucky Speedway on Friday night, using strong restarts to stay in contention before he broke free to win the wreck-filled race.

It was the fourth career series victory for Buescher, who also won at the track June 28. Parker Kligerman was second, followed by rookie Ty Dillon, pole-sitter Joey Coulter and Brian Scott.

Furyk leads Rose by one; Woods falls to 6 behind

Wire reports

Jim Furyk, the only American on the Ryder Cup team without a win this year, put himself in position Friday to join them.

Furyk made seven birdies through 10 holes at East Lake — including seven 3s to start the round — until he missed a few greens on the back nine that slowed his momentum. He wound up with a 6-under 64, giving him a one-shot lead over Justin Rose going into the weekend at the Tour Championship.

As for anyone questioning whether Furyk should have been a pick for the Ryder Cup?

He was more bothered by missing a 5-foot par putt on the 18th hole than what anyone thinks about his game or being in the Ryder Cup for the eighth straight time. With 16 wins, including a U.S. Open, and having qualified for every U.S. team since 1997, Furyk stopped believing he had to prove himself a long time ago.

All he cares about is winning the Tour Championship, with an outside shot at the FedEx Cup title and its $10 million bonus. Furyk was at 7-under 133 on a course where he won just two years ago.

Rose, who shared the 18-hole lead with Tiger Woods, made four birdies on the back nine and holed a 6-foot birdie putt on the 18th for a 68.

Woods went the other direction.

He was right in the mix when he made the turn, despite a double bogey on the eighth hole, But a series of bad swings that put him in bad positions led to four bogeys on the back nine, and Woods had a 73. It was his worst score at East Lake in 14 years, dating to a 76 in the second round in 1998. He was six strokes behind.

Bo Van Pelt made three bogeys on the last four holes and still had a 68 that put him two shots behind at 135, along with Masters champion Bubba Watson (66). Dustin Johnson, who had to summon his college teammate from Coastal Carolina to caddy for him when his regular had back problems, had a 67 and was another shot back, along with Georgia Tech alum Matt Kuchar (69).

Rory McIlroy, who is leading the FedEx Cup after winning the last two events, made an eagle on the 15th that turned around his fortunes. He had a 68 and was only four shots behind.

■ LPGA Tour: Defending champion Lexi Thompson shot a 3-under 69 to take a one-stroke lead into weekend play in the Navistar LPGA Classic.

The 17-year-old Thompson had a 12-under 132 total on the links-style Senator course at the Robert Trent Jones Golf Trail's Capitol Hill complex. She matched the tournament record Thursday with a career-best 63.

Mom: Gillispie verbally abused son

By Betsy Blaney
Associated Press

LUBBOCK, Texas — The mother of a teenager at Billy Gillispie's summer basketball camp claims in a letter to a top school administrator that the former Texas Tech coach repeatedly verbally abused her son, according to a document obtained Friday by The Associated Press.

The woman wrote that other coaches at the camp told her 17-year-old son that Gillispie "likes to pick someone and try to 'break them' for some reason," and that the young man "wasn't doing anything wrong," according to a letter to Texas Tech's chancellor obtained through an open records request.

Gillispie resigned from Texas Tech on Thursday, citing health concerns after he was hospitalized twice in the past month. The 52-year-old Gillispie stepped down amid allegations he mistreated players on his team.

The mother's name is redacted in the Aug. 20 letter to university chancellor Kent Hance. No written reply was made but Hance called the Texas Tech alum, who is a teacher, to discuss the matter, officials said.

On the camp's first day in late June the woman's son, now a high school senior, overthrew a pass to another camper.

"It happens," the mother wrote in her letter. "That's the only thing he thought brought on the barrage of insults spurred from the mouth of your coach Gillispie. This was the first of many such verbal attacks."

On Aug. 29, several Texas Tech players went to athletic director Kirby Hocutt with claims of mistreatment by Gillispie.

Two days later, the school announced it was scrutinizing Gillispie and his leadership. The same day CBSsports.com reported that Gillispie made players practice long hours, which led to injuries.

Just hours before Gillispie and Hocutt were to meet Aug. 31 to discuss the players' claims, the coach called 911 and was taken to a Lubbock hospital where he stayed for six days.

Wildcats will look to snap streak

■ Gators have reeled off 25 consecutive victories over UK

By Mark Long
Associated Press

GAINESVILLE, Fla. — No. 14 Florida has been a second-half team this season, outscoring opponents 50-13 after halftime and 27-0 in the fourth quarter.

That could change against Kentucky.

The Gators (3-0, 2-0 Southeastern Conference) have had a penchant for fast starts against the Wildcats (1-2), outscoring them 94-3 in the first quarter in the last four meetings. That early game success led to four consecutive blowouts, which helped make the series one of the most one-sided in college football.

Florida has won 25 consecutive games against Kentucky, the longest current win streak in an annual series in the Football Bowl Subdivision. The Gators will try to extend their dominance Saturday in The Swamp.

“None of those wins or losses have anything to do with Saturday,” Florida coach Will Muschamp said, shaking his head emphatically. “Zero.”

The Wildcats, who ended a longer losing streak to Tennessee last season, certainly believe they have a shot.

“Every team we play we feel like we got a chance to win,” running back Jonathan George said. “We’re gonna attack, we’re gonna work hard and keep the mentality that we can win. Anything is possible.”

Maybe so. But Florida has owned this series in recent years.

The Gators have used those fast starts to outscore Kentucky 200-36 in the last four games.

“You had to remind me,” Kentucky coach Joker Phillips said.

Phillips hasn’t beaten Florida in 22 tries — two as a head coach, four as a player and 16 as an assistant.

No one in Florida’s locker room could fathom that kind of frustration.

“It would (stink) not being able to beat a team, and I think it’s 25 years in a row we’ve beaten them or whatever,” safety Josh Evans said. “But that statistic is thrown out the room. It’s a new year and anything’s capable of happening in the SEC. We don’t look at their bad plays and what they need to work on. We look at what we need to work on, what we can do better and how we can win this game.”

The Gators figure they need to slow down Kentucky’s passing attack to extend the streak.

The Wildcats lead the SEC and rank 13th nationally in passing, averaging 322 yards a game through the air. Sophomore Maxwell Smith has completed 68.5 percent of his passes for 966 yards and eight touchdowns.

Tennessee had some pockets of success throwing against Florida last week, but the Gators clamped down in the second half. Florida gave up 120 yards after the break, including five in the fourth quarter, and just six points.

Coming off back-to-back road wins against Texas A&M and Tennessee and knowing an off week and then a home game against No. 2 LSU follow, Florida might seem like it’s primed for a letdown against Kentucky.

Then again, the Gators have played three consecutive stinkers at home — Furman and Florida State last November and Bowling Green in the season opener — and realize the Wildcats have plenty of motivation.

“We got to keep going,” linebacker Jon Bostic said. “We can’t look at it like we’ve beaten them so many times. It’s a team that is going to line up and try to beat us as well. We can’t try to look down on them.”

No players on either side of this series were around for Kentucky’s last win over Florida in 1986, and a few coaches weren’t even born the last time the Wildcats won in Gainesville (1979).

Florida offensive coordinator Brent Pease was on the losing end in 2001 and 2002, when he served as Kentucky’s play caller, and knows the talent gap leaves little margin for error.

“We knew we had to be on our game,” Pease said. “We couldn’t have a lot of mistakes. We had to keep the game close.”

Now, Pease might want to run up the score.

Former Kentucky quarterback Jared Lorenzen took some shots at Pease after Florida hired him.

“He’s freaking crazy and was brutal at UK when I was there,” Lorenzen posted on his Twitter page. “The good thing about Pease at UF is now we can shut them down.”

Pease responded by telling a Gator Club meeting in July that Lorenzen’s remarks would be “good for about two extra launch plays, trying to get 50 points on those guys when they come to campus.”

Pease backpedaled this week, saying Lorenzen’s remarks were “free speech America.”

As for scoring 50 — exactly what the Gators have averaged in the last four meetings?

“Hey, I didn’t make a quote there,” Pease said. “You know, I had fun. And I was responding to a question. That’s nothing personal.”

QBs to take center stage as Clemson visits FSU

By Brent Kallestad
Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — EJ Manuel of Florida State and longtime friend Tajh Boyd of Clemson have known each other since middle school and are now the top rated passers in the Atlantic Coast Conference head into a top-10 matchup on Saturday.

Boyd got the best of things last year in Clemson’s 35-30 win, while Manuel watched from the sidelines with a shoulder injury. Both players and teams are expected to be full strength when Florida State hosts the 10th-ranked Tigers.

“We are both going to be opponents and competitors and want to beat each other,” Manuel said. “That’s the fun part about getting to play your friends.”

Manuel, who has played just six quarters so far this season, has thrown for 525 yards and six touchdowns and one interception. Boyd has passed for 747 yards, a half-dozen scores and one pick.

Once again among those in college football’s stratosphere, the fourth-ranked Seminoles (3-0, 1-0 ACC) have a chance to show whether they learned from last year’s early-season collapse when they host 10th-ranked Clemson (3-0, 0-0) in Saturday’s marquee game nationally.

“We’ll be ready,” Seminole coach Jimbo Fisher promised after Thursday’s practice.

After soaring to fifth in the polls early last season, the Seminoles fell to Oklahoma 23-13 in their third game and then lost the next two at Clemson and Wake Forest by identical 35-30 scores.

“I think we’ve learned some lessons,” Fisher said. “Handling all that stuff that goes with those type of games.”

None are bigger Saturday when the Seminoles and Tigers meet in a matchup of ACC schools ranked in the top 10 for the first time since 2007.

The Seminoles are a two touchdown favorite and should be according to Clemson coach Dabo Swinney, who said earlier in the week that few teams in the nation, other than possibly top-ranked Alabama or No. 2 LSU, would be favored to win in Tallahassee this year.

“If I’m on the outside looking in, I’m probably picking Florida State too, but that’s why we play the game,” Swinney said. “They’re playing at home. That’s always a big advantage.”

He’s worried about Florida State’s defense, which has allowed a field goal all season.

“Defensively, they are probably as talented as anybody we’ve seen since I’ve been here,” said Swinney, who is 32-19 since replacing Tommy Bowden midway through the 2008 season.

“If they dominate our offensive line, it’s going to be a long night.”

Bridgewater gets ‘home’ game at FIU

■ Star QB will play before his friends, family

By Tim Reynolds
Associated Press

MIAMI — Teddy Bridgewater insists that this is no homecoming.

It’s not like the quarterback for No. 20 Louisville is ignoring that his team will play in Miami — his hometown — when it visits FIU on Saturday night. He’s not denying that the crowd will likely include plenty of friends and family, or that 21 of his Cardinal teammates also grew up in the South Florida region that spans Miami-Dade, Broward and Palm Beach counties.

For Bridgewater, who is off to a flying start in his sophomore season, all that sounds like distractions in the making. So he’s taking the simple route, saying all that matters to him is leading the Cardinals to their fourth straight win to open the season, even though this road trip is back to his home turf.

“I’m treating it like any other road game,” Bridgewater said. “And my main goal is just to go down there and play football. We’re going down there to play a football game.”

As good as that sounds, there’s no denying that there’s tons of ties that bind these rosters.

GARRY JONES/ASSOCIATED PRESS

Louisville quarterback Teddy Bridgewater (5) passes over North Carolina defensive lineman Sylvester Williams (92) during their game in Louisville last Saturday. The Cardinals will face Florida International tonight in Miami.

It’s no secret that Louisville coach Charlie Strong loves to recruit in the Miami area. FIU coach Mario Cristobal and Louisville recruiting coordinator Clint Hurtt both played college football at nearby Miami, and both were on the Hurricanes’ coaching staffs in recent years. There’s even a brother vs. brother element — FIU running back Darian Mallary and Louisville cornerback Andrew Johnson are siblings, set to potentially collide on the field for the first time.

Oh, if more intrigue is needed, there’s this: FIU went to Louisville last year and won 24-17, a loss that still stings the Cardinals.

“What is going to be critical at this time is we maintain our focus, we maintain our emotion and we are going to have to play with confidence and compete,” said Strong, whose team is beginning a three-game road swing after starting the year with three games at home. “Every second has to count. Last season, you look at FIU, and they came in here beat us.”

So this time, the Cardinals (3-0) plan to return the favor. And FIU (1-2) knows what happened last year will be on Louisville’s mind come Saturday.

The Panthers’ biggest problem in the early going has been on the defensive side, where they’ve allowed 46 points to Duke, 38 to Akron (FIU’s lone win) and 33 to UCF so far this season. That’s not sitting well with Cristobal, who is taking some consolation in that the Panthers have shown big improvement in the yards-allowed department in each of their past two games.

But against Louisville, they’re going to be tested big-time. Bridgewater has been surgical to open the year, completing nearly 82 percent of his passes.

“He looks like a senior,” Cristobal said. “He plays and has the temperament of a senior. ... I think they mentioned in camp he completed 90 percent of his throws. Now when you say that, you’ve got realize out of that 10 percent, you’d imagine some were drops, some were throwaways not to take a sack. He has been extremely efficient, extremely accurate. Ball-placement for him has been exceptional.

“Watching him in high school, you felt it was going to be that at some point in time. He just got there rather quickly.”

me a hard time about that play,” Lewis-Moore said. “But he’s really hard to bring down. He’s really shifty. You just have to keep him contained.”

But how?

Kelly compares playing Robinson to playing an option offense, saying the key is playing disciplined and making sure each player does his job.

“Because if you’re not in your proper fit, he’s going to go 70 yards,” Kelly said.

Kelly also doesn’t want to try to make the defense too complicated, saying keeping it simple allows the Irish to play fast.

Irish will try to tie up Michigan’s Shoelace

By Tom Coyne
Associated Press

SOUTH BEND, Ind. — Denard Robinson has left Notre Dame feeling helpless.

Two years ago, the Michigan quarterback known as Shoelace burst into the national spotlight with 502 yards of total offense and scored the game-winning TD with 27 seconds left against the Fighting Irish.

Notre Dame did a better job last season, until the fourth quarter. The Wolverines scored 28 fourth-quarter points, including two touchdown passes in the final 72 seconds by Robinson. It was a memorable third straight last-minute victory by the Wolverines over the Irish.

So after seeing Robinson gut the Notre Dame defense for 944 yards total offense in two games, Irish coach Brian Kelly just wants to limit the damage inflicted by the guy he describes as “the best player on the field.”

“There’s no easy answer. I can’t tell you there’s one thing that we can do against Denard Robinson,” Kelly said. “You’re going to have to give up a couple of things. You have to minimize the big plays against a young man like this.”

Takeaway the 87-yard TD run Robinson had against the Irish in 2010 — the one where he took the snap in the shotgun, ran right between two Irish defenders and raced untouched for the longest TD run ever in Notre Dame Stadium — and perhaps the Irish win. Take away a 77-yard completion late to Junior Hemingway in the third quarter last season, with Irish defensive end Kapron Lewis-Moore wrapped around Robinson’s legs, starting the Michigan comeback, and perhaps the Irish win.

“Some people still give

NAIA coaches will chase record

By Michael Marot
Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — Hank Biesiot and Kevin Donley are ready for a weekend coaching rumble that will span more 2,200 miles.

The two longtime, gray-haired coaches have each won 256 career games. If either, or both, gets No. 257 Saturday, they will earn a new title: NAIA career wins leader.

Round 1 takes place Saturday afternoon when Biesiot’s Dickinson State Blue Hawks travel to Southern Oregon.

Round 2 begins three hours later, when Donley and St. Francis (Ind.) host Concordia (Mich.) on Homecoming Weekend.

Let the banter begin.

“We’re similar enough to still be coaching and we’re both past (age) 40,” Biesiot said this week. “Maybe he’s a little more involved with 21st Century football, while I’m still kind of stuck in the middle of the 20th Century. He’s more of a man for all seasons.”

Or all kinds of victories.

Biesiot and Donley have cut through vastly different paths to reach the same spot at exactly the same time— on the brink of breaking Frosty Westering’s career record.

Advice

Ex-boyfriend should help sexual assault victim

Dear Amy: My ex-girlfriend and I did not communicate for five months. The relationship did not end well.

We spoke recently and she informed me that she was sexually assaulted by her best guy friend. He is a drinking buddy of hers. She said the friendship is over, but because he is extremely well off and always pays for everything, I wouldn't be shocked if they were hanging out in a month.

She is the definition of stubborn and will most likely stuff this painful experience down with all the others.

What advice would you

AMY DICKINSON

give to her? I care about her and would like to pass it along.

— Caring Ex

Dear Caring: My advice is that your ex should go to the police so this guy can be charged with sexual assault. She should also be examined by a physician, get a pregnancy test and be tested for STDs. She should seek counseling.

Pushing down painful experiences doesn't work. Burying trauma can make her vulnerable and eventually numb her to the reality and consequences of her own choices.

This is frightening, and I assume she reached out to you because she trusts you to help her. I hope you will.

She should contact the Rape, Abuse and Incest National Network to communicate with an online or phone counselor about this sexual assault. Their website is rainn.org and hotline is 800-656-HOPE (4673).

Dear Amy: I've been divorced for 25 years. Since then, I've experienced some serious issues, but got through with a lot of therapy. I've put my life back together and am happy.

My two sons are successful adults, but my oldest son and my ex-wife despise me, and I haven't had contact with them for years. My youngest has remained in my life and has been supportive. His mother and brother both deride him for maintaining contact with me.

Now my youngest is ready to get married, and I don't know what to do about the wedding. I don't want my presence to be a distraction. I'm thinking I can attend the ceremony but skip the reception so that my son doesn't have to worry about me diverting positive attention from him and his bride. What do you think?

— Want to do Right

Dear Right: You are very thoughtful to anticipate problems and to keep your son and his bride at the forefront of this event.

Discuss this with your son and his fiancée. You may find that they are willing to tolerate some awkwardness, discomfort or distraction to include you in their wedding and reception. Let them guide you.

Dear Amy: "Confused

Horoscope

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY: (Sept. 22). You'll like the new characters that come into your life this year, and you'll be happy for their influence on your story. People will give you things in October. Some gifts will be straight-up wonderful, and others will be mixed blessings. December sends you on an adventurous vacation. August brings a windfall. Gemini and Scorpio people adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 7, 25, 12, 49 and 16.

ARIES: (March 21-April 19). You'll have some ambivalence about going through with the event you set up earlier in the week. You can interpret this as a sign that you've changed since then.

TAURUS: (April 20-May 20). Ask for what you've long wanted. There's no reason you shouldn't be given the royal treatment, except that no one will know it's what you expect unless you ask for it.

GEMINI: (May 21-June 21). Friends are proud to know you. Plus, your life might be more exciting than theirs at the moment, which means they'll share — probably more than you would have liked — on your behalf.

CANCER: (June 22-July 22). Maybe gravity is caused by gravitons, but no one has seen a graviton, so who knows? Similarly, a loved one's downer mood has no traceable source, so don't take it personally.

LEO: (July 23-Aug. 22). The circumstances around you will confirm your opinion of how things should be, and so your mood will be light — until they don't confirm them anymore. Then your mood will be busy.

VIRGO: (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). Those with nutty, irrational beliefs are often willing to go the distance to justify them. That could influence you to go another route today: open-minded and explaining nothing.

LIBRA: (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). What matters is not what you talk about, but how you flesh out your topics with a personal connection. Bringing more of yourself to superficial relationships will deepen them.

SCORPIO: (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). If you surprise a horse, you chance receiving a swift kick to the sternum. With a gentle approach and a reassuring pat, you can show a horse that you come in peace. People are the same today, so proceed with caution.

SAGITTARIUS: (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). Melding your personality to suit those around you will be counterproductive. Today, fitting in is a near impossible feat. Instead, create your own niche.

CAPRICORN: (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). Your creative mind is abuzz. You'll allow yourself to wander to some extent, but you know it's only a matter of time before you must rein yourself in and get some work done.

AQUARIUS: (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). Contradictions are a natural part of who you are. You needn't defend your clashing opinions. So what if they are incongruent? So are a lot of the more sophisticated aspects of life.

PISCES: (Feb. 19-March 20). Complainers abound. Some of them are quite humorous in their apt descriptions of what's wrong. But you most admire the ones who don't talk about the conditions and just experience them.

Baking soda, cornstarch may help remove smell from old books

Dear Heloise: I came across a box of old books that I would like to keep, but they have a musty smell. Is there any way to remove it?

— A Reader in Texas

Dear Reader: This is a common question, and being a collector of old books, it is a problem I've often encountered. Many times the musty smell is just from age.

Take some baking soda (not for antique or rare books) or cornstarch and sprinkle between the pages. When done, slip the book into a plastic bag

(large zipper bag) and place in a cool, dry place. Let sit for about a week or so.

When the week is up, brush out the powder. Repeat, if necessary. Caution: Never place baking soda on damp books.

Once the musty smell is gone, store your books carefully. If they are older, heavy or extra-large books, they should be stored flat on their side. Storing them upright can damage the pages and crack the spines.

— Heloise

Dear Heloise: As time goes on, skin can get thinner, and unfortunately, we have to wear more and more bandages (with blood tests, etc.). The tape can be really hard to peel off.

A good way is to hit the tape with your hair dryer for a quick minute, as this will melt the adhesive, and the tape will come off without taking your skin with it.

— David McNair, Jackson, Miss.

Dear David: A good hint to use along with that is baby, olive or even vegetable oil to help remove the bandage and residue.

Here's how: Simply soak a cotton ball in one of the oils and apply to the bandage, allowing it to soak the area. Let it sit for a few minutes, then gently try to remove the bandage. If it doesn't come off right away, apply a little more oil and try again.

There are adhesive removers available. Compare brands, because there seems to be quite a price difference. When you have blood drawn, etc., ask the health-care provider what he or she recommends.

— Heloise

Dear Heloise: I just had a loved one pass away, and I received many cards with money in them. One thing that I had never heard of before was that several cards had a book of stamps for the thank-you cards. I thought this was a great idea. Next time, instead of money or flowers, I will send a book of stamps.

Eat before you play if it works for you, keeps you energized

Dear Dr. Donohue: Will you give your opinion on eating before playing? I play tennis regularly with the same group.

Before I play, I always have something to eat. My fellow players tell me I shouldn't. They say that the rise in blood sugar from eating carbohydrates will cause a release of insulin that actually drops blood sugar quickly.

According to them, I won't have enough energy to play well.

From my own perception of how I feel, I disagree. How about you?

— M.J.

Dear M.J.: If you want to eat something before you play and if you find that it keeps you energized when you play, keep it up.

DR. DONOHUE

The argument your friends gave you is something often quoted.

It's best to eat a snack, a carbohydrate snack, an hour before you play. It will keep you energized during play.

However, since your approach works for you, I can't fault it.

Dear Dr. Donohue: The enclosed clipping is one of your articles. In the first question answered, you say, "Stay out of the sun between 10 a.m. and 3 p.m., the time of most intense radiation."

In the answer to the second question, you say, "The exposure to sun should take place during the most intense hours of sun radiation between 10 a.m. and 3 p.m."

This appears to be a contradiction. Have I missed a subtle difference?

— M.W.

Dear M.W.: The difference between the two questions isn't very subtle.

The first question had to do with sun tanning. Those devoted to the process spend hours and hours at it, almost in worshipful adoration of the sun. These people run the risk of coming down with skin cancer later in life.

The second question had to do with the skin's generation of vitamin D on exposure to sunlight.

If people expose themselves to six to 15 minutes of sun during the hours of most intense sunlight, then the skin manufactures all the vitamin D people need.

And they need do it only two or three times a week. That amount of sun exposure is not a risk for the development of skin cancer.

Dear Dr. Donohue: Does anyone make a home cholesterol device that gives you a reading of your cholesterol? If so, where do I get one? Should diabetics wear socks? What material should they be?

Are there any foods, vitamins or supplements that lower blood sugar and cholesterol at the same time?

— J.

Dear J.: I don't know of any device that provides home testing of cholesterol. Diabetics have to be careful about feet infections. They don't have to wear socks. It they prefer to wear them, the common sock materials are up to them to choose.

And finally I don't know of any food, vitamin or supplement that lowers both cholesterol and blood sugar simultaneously. You pitched me three curveballs, and I struck out.

Don't miss out on God's love — the greatest blessing we'll ever know

Do you believe that God loves you? I'd dare say that all who are reading these words would answer that question in the affirmative. You are either an atheist, agnostic or a very bitter, cynical person if you don't believe that God loves you. Let me ask you a second question: Do you believe that He loves you unconditionally? By this I mean is there anything that we could ever do that would cause God to feel any different toward us? We are told in First John that God is love. It is in His very nature to show His care and compassion toward us. God loves both the saint and the sinner. He shows His loving kindness toward us even when we fall to our lowest point of moral and/or spiritual decay. He shows His mercy toward us when we are at our best and at our worst. There is nothing that can ever change how God feels about us. God loves the unlovable. He cares for those whom no one else can care for. We sometimes look at the lowest forms of humanity and wonder how God could ever have compassion on them. We look at all of the mass murderers and rapists out there and those who commit heinous and unthinkable crimes against humanity and wonder how God can ever love them. But God is perfect in every way. God can love the most vile sinner because it is who and what He is. God can extend the same hope and forgiveness to those who have lived a hardened and rebellious life against Him and have shown no regard to Him or His laws as He does anyone else who comes to Him with a repentant heart and a desire to know Him. I can't help but feel sorry for those who do not know how great, mighty and powerful the love of God is. In Romans 8, the Apostle Paul draws the conclusion that there's no barrier or obstacle that we can ever encounter that can block us from the love of God. The greatest part of all is that it is in reach of everyone. When you talk about the love of God, you are talking about the most powerful forces known on earth and in heaven. God's great love for every human being was the compelling force behind

God sending His Son into the world to die for our sins. While God is perfect in His love for us, God is perfect in His justice. He gave us His law to govern our lives, but He knew that we could never live up to the law. The Bible says in Romans 5:8, "But God commends his love toward us, in that while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us." Even when we were unfit and not worthy of His consideration, Christ showed us His mercy and grace and took our sins upon Himself and died for us. You may say, "Yes, but that was long ago. We are living in a whole different world than first-century people. I totally agree with you. The world has grown dramatically and has vastly changed since the days that Christ walked the earth, but the human heart has not. The soul of the human spirit is very much the same as it was back then. It has been said that the more things change, the more they remain the same. Jeremiah said, "The heart is deceitful above all things and desperately wicked: who can know it?" (17:9) People have been trying to figure out the human mind forever. It is extremely complex and mystifying. It is as diverse as the individual. Each mind is unique to the person who has it. Like the human fingerprint, no two people are alike in that regard. This is what makes a person who and what they are. We are all different because God made us that way. No one can understand us like God can. He knows all things about us, right down to the very thoughts of our mind. He knows what makes us tick. He knows the needs of the human heart. While we are all different in many ways, we are all alike in many others. One such way is to love and be loved. All of us respond to this very powerful emotion. Yet, there are so many out there today who are searching to find this in its truest and richest forms. Too often people are turning up empty because they are looking for it in all of the wrong places. They think they can find it in sex. They think they can find it in the right man or woman. But real, true and genuine love can only be found in God and His Son the Lord Jesus Christ and it is manifested in our lives through the power of the Holy Spirit. If you know God through a personal relationship with the Lord, then you know the love of God. You can give witness to how it has changed and revolutionized your life. Jesus said, "If you love me, keep my commandments" (John 14:15). The love of God in our hearts should motivate us to live our lives in such a way as to bring honor and glory to Him. We should start each day with a prayer thanking Him for His great love and asking Him to show us how we can serve Him better. If you don't know the love of God, then you are missing out on the greatest blessing of life. The God who loves us so much that He sent His only Son into this world to suffer and die for us has made it possible to know Him as our Lord and Savior. In closing, let me just remind you of those old familiar words of Jesus when He said, "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish but have everlasting life" (John 3:16). Until next week — God bless.

Two groups offer support to fired teacher

The Associated Press

FORT WAYNE, Ind. – Two national groups are supporting a discrimination lawsuit filed by a former Indiana parochial school teacher who claims she was fired for trying to get pregnant through in vitro fertilization. The American Society for Reproductive Medicine and the American Civil Liberties Union filed friends of the court briefs this week in support of Emily Herx. Herx filed a federal lawsuit in April against the Roman Catholic Diocese of Fort Wayne-South Bend, claiming she was discriminated against for a disability when her teaching contract wasn't renewed. The Journal Gazette reports Herx suffers from infertility, which is protected under the Americans with Disabilities Act. When diocese officials learned Herx had undergone in vitro fertilization — a treatment banned under Catholic doctrine — they decided not to renew her contract. Herx, who had been a language arts teacher at St. Vincent de Paul School, argues in her lawsuit that her termination violated both the Civil Rights Act of 1964 and the Americans with Disabilities Act.

City wants church to get rid of homeless camp

The Associated Press

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — The city of Nashville is taking a church to court over a homeless encampment on its property.

Green Street Church of Christ Pastor Jim Atwood told The Tennessean that his congregation believes the church's property belongs to God. They are merely its custodians. "We believe that it is God's will for his property to be used to provide a place for needy people to come, a place where they are safe and a place where they can begin to put back together the broken pieces of their lives," Atwood said.

But to the city, the encampment of about 10 tents is a zoning violation.

Metro Nashville attorney Tom Cross said the city is trying to come to an agreement with the church before a November court date.

"We are trying to understand what our responsibilities are, potentially, to accommodate this use," he said. "This is more complicated than our typical case. I don't see this as a constitutional issue, but we would like to see if we can figure out a way that the church's mission can be fulfilled, but also, at the same time, that public health and safety concerns are protected also."

Church attorney Tripp Hunt said he does see it as a religious freedom issue.

"It is the position of the church that they're protected under federal statute and under the Constitution of the United States," he said.

Referring to chapter 25 in the book of Mark, Hunt said, "In that chapter, it says that if you help the poor you are helping Jesus himself. Under that basis alone they feel that it is their obligation to help the poor."

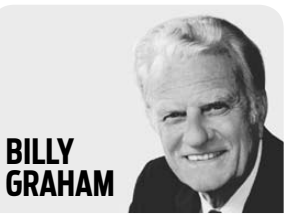

Hunt said the church is a good spot for the encampment because it is near downtown, near a job center and near a bus line.

Those who have drifted away can still return to Christ

Dear Dr. Graham: I supposedly gave my life to God when I was a teenager, and at the time I was very sincere about it. But eventually I drifted away and I know I haven't been living the way I should. If I died right now, do you think I'd still go to heaven?

— D. McG.

Dear D. McG.: Only God knows how sincere your commitment was as a teenager and whether or not you truly gave your life to Christ.

BILLY GRAHAM
COLUMNIST

Jesus warned us about the dangers of apparently welcoming the Word of God into our lives, then allowing "the worries of this life, the deceitfulness of wealth and the desires for other things come in and choke the word, making it unfruitful" (Mark 4:19).

But in reality, this isn't the issue, because the question you need to face is this: What does God want me to do with my life right now?

The answer is plain: He wants you to turn from your sins and your old ways of living, and commit your life without reserve to Jesus Christ.

He doesn't just want you to clean up your life (although that's important); He wants you to put your faith and trust in Jesus Christ, and completely turn your life over to Him.

What keeps you from doing this? Only you can answer that question, but I hope you'll face it honestly. Is it a particular sin?

Is it a wrong relationship you know you'll have to give up? Or is it simply a desire to run your own life?

Whatever the reason, don't gamble with your eternal destiny, and don't let another day go by without Christ.

"But who do you say that I am?"

In the Gospel of Mark we find Jesus asking the disciples what are the people saying about him, "Who do the people say that I am?" Jesus then asks them, "But who do you say that I am?" Peter replies, "You are the Christ." Peter has the right answer. In Matthew's Gospel Jesus will say that this wisdom has been revealed by his Heavenly Father. Who do you say that I am? The problem arises when Jesus begins to speak about what it means that he is the Christ. As he tells them that he must suffer and die as the Christ, this does not fit into Peter's expectation of the Christ. Peter is looking for a Christ who will rule in power and glory not suffer and die.

But who do you say that I am? Our answer to that question is very telling. Most of us know the correct answer and what to say, but then do we support that answer with the way that we live. It is very important that the actions of our lives support what we profess with our lips. If we profess that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of the Living God, then our lives must reflect that belief with action. This belief challenges us to follow Christ's commandments, loving God and our neighbor. If we see someone naked and hungry and we pat them on the back and say stay warm and be well fed without doing anything how have we answered the question. If we join in gossip or malicious speech about a coworker or family member, who do we say that Christ is? Our actions profess our faith as loud if not louder at times than our mouth.

If we join Peter and say, "You are the Christ" then let our lives echo this belief. May we strive to profess the Christ we believe in through our daily actions, decisions, words and deeds.

Labor strife threatens American Airlines flights

■ Dispute with pilots, slowdown in maintenance upsets schedule

By David Koenig
Associated Press

DALLAS — With American Airlines canceling dozens of flights every day, passengers with fall travel plans are confronting an inconvenient question: Should they avoid the nation's third-largest carrier because labor strife might cause delays and cancellations?

Several prominent travel gurus say it's too early to "book away" from American. They say the number of canceled flights is still small and American can find room on other planes for displaced passengers.

The airline expects to cancel up to 2 percent of its total flights through the end of October because of a dispute with pilots. Even if passengers find other flights, it's a setback for American, which is struggling to reverse years of heavy losses.

American executives believe pilots are calling in sick and crews are slowing operations by filing huge numbers of maintenance reports to punish the company for imposing tough cost-cutting measures as part of its bankruptcy reorganization.

The union insists pilots are reporting to work as usual, and it blames the cancellations on company mismanagement and problems with old planes.

ON-TIME ARRIVALS DROP

American already has canceled 300 flights this week, or 1.25 percent of its schedule. That number is sure to rise. On Sunday and Monday, American scrapped more than 5 percent of its flights.

The percentage of American flights arriving late has ballooned. On Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, fewer than half its flights arrived on time, according to flight-tracking service FlightStats.com.

At midday Thursday, 62 percent of American flights were on time, compared with at least 90 percent at United, Delta and US Airways, FlightStats' figures showed.

Bruce Hicks, a spokesman for parent company AMR Corp. blamed pilot sick leave, which he said is running 20 percent higher than a year ago. There also has been a "significant" increase in pilots calling in maintenance requests, often right before scheduled departure, he added.

Hicks said American has enough pilots and until recently had been posting its best on-time numbers in years. He said the airline was contacting passengers and giving them options, such as letting them fly standby on earlier flights at no extra charge.

PASSENGERS SURE TO FLEE?

Former AMR CEO Robert Crandall said passengers will jump to other airlines.

"You can be sure it is happening already," said Crandall, who ran American for 13 years when the airline was known for innovations such as its frequent-flier program and for strikes by union employees. "Every time the pilots pulled a job action, the public books away."

American has a long history of poor labor relations. It endured strikes by flight attendants and pilots in the 1990s. Workers accepted pay cuts in 2003 to keep the company out of bankruptcy, then were enraged when hundreds of management employees received bonuses that for a few topped $1 million.

The tension has increased since AMR filed for bankruptcy protection in November. In April, American's three unions threw their support behind a potential takeover bid from US Airways Group Inc.

While unions for flight attendants and ground workers accepted new cost-cutting measures this year, the 8,000 members of the Allied Pilots Association rejected the company's last contract offer. AMR answered by getting a federal bankruptcy judge's permission to impose new pay and work terms on the pilots that include cuts in benefits and more outsourcing of flying to other airlines.

NO SABOTAGE

Union leaders say pilots are angry but aren't sabotaging the company.

"There is no organized sickout that APA is involved in, absolutely not," union spokesman Gregg Overman said.

Statistics provided to the union by American show 564 pilots, or 7.5 percent, called in sick Tuesday. That's the second-highest rate for the 18th day of each month over the past year, but the sick rate was at least 6 percent in nine other months. It peaked at 9.5 percent in October 2011.

The union blamed this week's cancellations on mechanical delays tied to American's aging fleet — about 15 years on average, and even higher for the MD-80 planes that make up the backbone of its domestic fleet. The union also said American should have rehired more furloughed pilots.

Other airline unions have expressed their displeasure with management by calling in sick or slowing operations, and some have gotten in trouble.

Last September, a federal judge ordered the union for US Airways pilots to stop disrupting the airline by making sure flights were late. In 2008, a judge determined United Airlines pilots carried out illegal sickouts and slowdowns and ordered them to stop.

JOB ACTION?

American's pilot union was fined $45 million after a 1999 sickout over bringing in pilots from a low-cost airline AMR bought. AMR and the union reached a settlement that reduced the union's loss.

In each instance, the airline went to court to force pilots to speed things up. Crandall said American might be forced to do the same thing this time.

"It is perfectly obvious that this is a job action by the pilots," Crandall said. "I think it's childish, it's self-defeating and it's harmful to the company and to other employees."

American is particularly vulnerable to long-term damage if passengers choose other carriers because it is already in bankruptcy and weak compared with bigger rivals United and Delta, he said.

DON'T JUMP YET

As the week has unfolded, and American posted slightly better on-time arrivals, travel experts advised passengers to wait before they decide to avoid American.

"When people ask, 'Should I book away from American?' I think about whether I'd want my mom getting stranded at (the Dallas-Fort Worth airport) because American canceled her flight home," said Tim Winship, who runs travel website Frequent-

Flier.com. "I'd tell her to go ahead and book the trip."

Winship's advice is colored by his reluctance to pile on a beleaguered airline.

"They need the business more than ever," he said. "I'd hate to be one of the nails in their coffin."

George Hobica, founder of airfarewatchdog.com and a frequent flier, predicted American soon will fix the delays and cancellations. He said he has seen company employees trying extra hard to be nice and to help passengers who are bumped or otherwise inconvenienced.

American's predicament comes during one of the slowest travel periods of the year. That will help the airline find new flights for stranded passengers, Hobica said.

Study adds fire to debate over modified corn

■ Food labeling initiative is on November ballot in California

By Carolyn Lochhead
San Francisco Chronicle

WASHINGTON — A study released by French scientists is roiling the debate over California's food labeling initiative because it found rats fed genetically engineered corn, or fed water with the Roundup herbicide along with such corn, suffered tumors and kidney and liver damage.

Lead scientist Gilles-Eric Seralini, a microbiology professor at the University of Caen in Normandy, called the results "really alarming." He said his study was the first long-term look at the effects of genetically engineered crops.

Other scientists were dubious. Bob Goldberg, professor of molecular, cell and developmental biology at the UCLA and a member of the National Academy of Sciences, called the study "bogus."

"There is not one serious scientist who works in the area of plant genetics who has done anything serious over the last 15 or 20 years who would consider anything less than these crops being perfectly safe," Goldberg said.

The study was published in the journal Food and Chemical Toxicology and backed by the Committee for Research and Independent Information on Genetic Engineering. The scientific group, founded by Seralini, is hostile to genetic engineering.

A November ballot measure in California called Proposition 37 would require labeling of foods with genetically engineered ingredients, affecting most packaged food in the state. More than 85 percent of U.S. corn and soybean crops are genetically engineered, mainly to resist herbicides.

Stacy Malkan, a spokeswoman for California Right to Know, the group backing Prop 37, said the most "important and shocking part of it is this is the first available long-term study" of genetically modified organisms, "which have been in the food supply for the better part of 20 years."

The Nationwide Series draws down to its final seven races starting with today's fall race at Kentucky Speedway. A field including Elliott Sadler, Austin Dillon, Ricky Stenhouse Jr., Brad Keselowski, Joey Logano and Justin Allgaier will take to the 2.4-km tri-oval in this race's first-ever running. Dillon dominated here in June, leading 192 of 200 laps in winning his first career Nationwide race.

6:30 p.m. on 14
College Football

A rare night game in South Bend, Ind., sees the Michigan Wolverines visiting the Notre Dame Fighting Irish. Notre Dame has only hosted eight prime-time games, with three of those being against Michigan (most recently in 1990). Irish head coach Brian Kelly will try to improve on last year's 8-5 record and get the Irish to a major bowl game. Michigan coach Brady Hoke took the Wolverines to an 11-2 record in his first season.

CSI: Crime Scene Investigation

After a man is shot at point-blank range inside a casino, Russell (Ted Danson) and his team shut down the building to find the shooter in "Split Decisions." Elisabeth Shue, George Eads, Paul Guilfoyle and Jorja Fox also star.

7 p.m. on 1A
Movie: Shanghai Noon

Talk about "East meets West." Jackie Chan shows off his usual eye-popping martial-arts moves in this lighthearted tale set in 1880s Nevada. His character, Chon Wang, is there to help rescue a kidnapped Chinese princess (Lucy Liu) with a little help from a laid-back train robber and an American Indian woman (Owen Wilson, Brandon Merrill).

8 p.m. on 44
Criminal Minds

The BAU is in Atlantic City to investigate a series of casino-related murders with a ritualistic element in this episode. Garcia (Kirsten Vangsness) bonds with Morgan (Shemar Moore) after an argument with her boyfriend, Kevin (Nicholas Brendon), but fears they might have gotten a little too close. Dean Cain ("Lois & Clark: The New Adventures of Superman") guest stars as a down-on-his-luck gambler in "Snake Eyes."

8 p.m. on 2
Movie: Underworld: Awakening

For all the other kinds of roles she's done, Kate Beckinsale evidently kept a warm spot for this horror-adventure franchise. In this 2012 round, 3-D effects enhance the action as the star's vampire heroine tries to keep humans from ending the war between her own kind and Lycans ... by eliminating both species. Michael Ealy ("Common Law"), India Eisley and Theo James help Beckinsale handle some of the heavy lifting and high kicking.

9 p.m. on 1M
Movie: Final Destination 5

The previous installment of the horror series supposedly was the last one, but clearly, there are more people to go on the run from the Grim Reaper. In this 2011 case, they're survivors of a suspension-bridge disaster ... most of whom meet untimely ends anyway as fate literally catches up to them. Stars include David Koechner ("The Office"), Emma Bell ("The Walking Dead") and franchise veteran Tony Todd ("Candyman").

10 p.m. on 35
Austin City Limits

There was a lot going on this past New Year's Eve, so if you missed Coldplay's "ACL" appearance that night, here's another chance to catch it. In its second time on the show, the British alt-rock band performs songs from its album "Mylo Xyloto," along with earlier hits.

10 p.m. on 44
Two and a Half Men

After Chelsea (Jennifer Taylor) finds nude photos of another woman on his phone, Charlie (Charlie Sheen) joins Alan and Herb (Jon Cryer, Ryan Stiles) along with imposing next-door neighbor Jerome (guest star Michael Clarke Duncan) in a night of alcohol-fueled sexual reminiscences. Angus T. Jones co-stars in "The Two Finger Rule."

10 p.m. on 17
Movie: Spider-Man

The Marvel comic book comes to life in this 2002 adventure starring Tobey Maguire as high-schooler Peter Parker, who is bitten by a radioactive spider and acquires superpowers. But as any Spidey fan knows, the socially inept Parker has a rough time coming to terms with his new abilities, which indirectly cause a family tragedy. Rosemary Harris and Cliff Robertson play Peter's aunt and uncle, with Kirsten Dunst as the girl he loves.

10 p.m. on 10
Law & Order: Special Victims Unit

Stabler and Benson (Christopher Meloni, Mariska Hargitay) investigate a woman after she is discovered bound and almost suffocated — and possibly raped — in her bed in "Painless." She then commits suicide while being treated in a hospital emergency room, prompting the police detectives to wonder about her apparent link to a physician (guest star Marlee Matlin).

10:33 p.m. on 10
Friends

Central Perk heats up when guest stars Billy Crystal and Robin Williams drop by as strangers having a mysterious conversation. Chandler (Matthew Perry) doesn't know what to do when his boss (Sam McMurray) playfully pats his bottom. PARADE

Simply Delicious
By Sheila Lukins

"I'd like to learn some different ways to prepare tuna."
—Kathy Mo Farmington, 1

The goodness of fresh tuna is no "fish tale." Tuna is versatile and virtually fat-free (no you're no choice but to cook it quickly). When buying tuna, look for firm, dark-red "meat." Bluefin is the finest grade, slightly fattier than most; next is yellowfin, which is equally easy yet more readily available and affordable. Tuna also takes well to freezing; its quality isn't sacrificed. Defrost the fish slowly in the fridge, then proceed with your recipe.

Tuna 101

Hot Tuna

The peppercorns should be crushed, not ground. Cook only the edges of the tuna steaks. Do not overcook the fish or it will dry out. Try a nonstick skillet.

6 tuna steaks (6 to 8 ounces each), cut 1 inch thick
2 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil
1. Place the tuna in a bowl to fit. Add the oil, lemon juice, salt and pepper. Turn the tuna to coat well in the marinade. Let rest 15 to 20 minutes, turning once.
2. Heat the nonpercorns in a double boiler over medium heat, adding 2 to 3 tablespoons of water. Add the tuna steaks, and cook for 4 minutes per side for medium-rare. Add the tuna steaks, and cook for 4 minutes per side for medium-rare.
